ANOTHER BRIBE OFFER FOR LODGE VOTE REVEALED

$10,000 REWARD!

The AMERICAN will pay $10,000 REWARD to any person who will furnish this newspaper with legal proof of violation of the law in the recent senatorial contest. This means proof of corruption, evidence of attempts at bribery, coercion or other violations of the law that results in the conviction of the guilty party or parties. Legal protection guaranteed to those giving information.

Raymond S. Bridgman, the veteran State House reporter of the Worcester Post, in his correspondence to his paper corroborates the correspondent of the Fall River Globe that there had been scandalous coercion in obtaining votes for Lodge.

Mr. Bridgman tells about a promise made of a foreign appointment to a Democratic member if he would support Lodge. The Democrat refused. He tells about a Republican who said that his vote for Lodge was the most "repugnant thing he ever did."

Here is an excerpt from Mr. Bridgman's articles:

Treadway Misses Mark.

After the election Wednesday, President Treadway of the Senate gave out for publication a congratulation upon the result, making particular mention of the alleged fact that this had been accomplished by means entirely fair and without undue influence.

Perhaps nothing will ever be done to prove undue influence. Every one knows the extreme difficulty and, usually, the impossibility of proving the truth of current statements regarding corruption which may be heard in the State House. In this case it may be impossible to prove the truth.

But it is certain to any one in touch with events that the President's remarks are far from the truth and show that he has not been informed about some things. He cannot prove his negative, but there are statements on the other side which seem reliable, but cannot be proved to the satisfaction of a court of law.

Under injunction of confidence not to bring his name into the matter, but to tell what was going on, a Democratic legislator, before the vote in either branch, said that when he was at home over Sunday, he was visited by a Democrat who said to him that if he would vote for Senator Lodge or absent himself at the time of voting he could have either a foreign consulate or a place in some foreign embassy, and that this would be secured for him by "a man who did things."

The Democrat who made the proposition did not come directly from "the man who did things," but he named as the man who sent him, one who is very near to "the man who did things" and is himself a corporation lawyer of exceedingly lucrative practice in a city where there are many prosperous industries which get many benefits from the tariff and which are recipients of government favor.

Names Are Given.

Names were given in both cases. It may well be that "the man who did things" did not now of the use made of his name. It is not asserted that he did, but this was the offer held out.

PHILLIPS BATTLES FOR LIFE

NEW YORK, Jan. 24. David Graham Phillips, the author, who was shot yesterday afternoon by Fitzhugh Coyle Goldsborough, Socialist, graduate of Harvard University, is expected to recover. He is resting comfortably in Bellevue Hospital today and the attending physician expresses confidence that he will be able to pull through. Dr. L. W. Hotchkiss of the visiting staff of the hospital today gave out this statement:

"Mr. Phillips has a good chance to recover. The only danger lies in the possibility that the lung was punctured by the bullet that struck him in the chest. Pneumonia is quite likely to follow such a wound.

"One saving factor is that the bullets are very small. They are of steel and of high velocity, proof of which is had from the fact that they went all through the front of his body and came out at the back.

"Fortunately the bullet dived into the abdomen about along close to the skin and did not puncture the intestines, otherwise the outlook would be hopeless."

Senator Beveridge Arrives.

While the body of Goldsborough lay in an undertaking shop in West Thirty-eight street, awaiting the arrival of his father, Dr. Edmund K. Goldsborough of Washington, Senator Beveridge of Indiana arrived from the capitol to-day and hurried to the bedside of his former classmate at De Pau University. Mr. Beveridge was almost overcome with emotion as he stood by the bedside of Phillips, and he was penalized to stay only a short time. The author recognized his friend and shook hands with the Senator, saying:

"Don't worry; I'm going to pull through all right."

"Keep up your courage," answered the Senator, and left the room with tears in his eyes. As he went away from the hospital he said to the reporters:

"This is shocking. I cannot express my feelings. Mr. Phillips has the most lovable character of any man I know and has not an enemy in the world."

Senator Beveridge said that he would stay in New York until Mr. Phillips was out of danger. He asked to be notified immediately if there were any change for the worse so that he could hasten to the bedside of his friend.

Though the police are confident that Goldsborough had no accomplice in his attempt on the life of the author, nevertheless District Attorney Whitman and Coroner Holtzhauser are making a thorough inquiry into the life of the would-be assassin who committed suicide after he had shot Phillips six times in front of the Princeton Club.

Shooting Mystery Unsolved.

The mystery surrounding the shooting has thus far been unsolved, though the clue on which Coroner Holtzhauser is working is that Goldsborough shot the author in the belief that he had injured himself and his mother and sister in his novel, "The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig."

So far as the coroner has learned, the Assassin comes of a prominent Maryland family. Goldsborough formerly lived in Washington, where his father, Edward K. Goldsborough, resides at present, and at one time he played in the Pittsburg Orchestra. Goldsborough has been in this city less than three months, and fellow-students of the rooming house where he lived at No. 125 East Nineteenth street told the authorities to-day that he seemed to act queerly at times.

Goldsborough apparently had studied carefully the routine of the novelist's daily activity. In fact, he had lived within a few doors of Phillips's domicile for several weeks in order to be within striking distance of his victim. The novelist did not know who was trailing him, although he had received threatening letters.

Indeed yesterday afternoon shortly before he was shot he received a telegram signed with his own name in which he was warned to look out for his life. Until Goldsborough had read "The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig" he had pored over every line written by Phillips whom he fairly worshipped to the point of admiration.

This attitude changed to one of unrestraining hatred when he imagined he saw in the character of Joshua Craig a portrayal of himself and in the heroine Margaret and the marriage grandmother respectively his sister and his mother, whose happiness, he believed Phillips had used to enact scenes in which family skeletons were revealed.

Sister at Bedside.

Mrs. Carolyn Prevert, a sister of the wounded man, spent the greater part of the night at the hospital, where she was joined early to-day by Harrison W. Phillips, a brother, who arrived only a few days ago from his home in Denver. Despite his weak condition the wounded author insisted on talking to his brother.

The patient presented an interesting case to the doctors at Bellevue. One bullet had passed clean through his body, imbedding itself in his clothing after boring out of the back. There was a division of opinion among some of the medical practitioners as to the effect of this wound. Another bullet entered the abdomen of the third in the right hip, the fourth in the left hip, the fifth in the right thigh and the sixth in the left forearm. Wonder was expressed that the novelist did not bleed to death.

Mrs. J. N. Cuneo to Eat Squab a Day on Wager

MRS. JOAN NEWTON CUNEO

MRS. CUNEO TO EAT SQUAB A DAY

Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo, the most noted woman automobilist in the country, who has won many races and is well known in Boston, is pretty sure to gain additional fame in other lines than automobiling if she successfully carries out the feat that her husband has wagered $100 against $200 that she can do.

The feat is that of eating a broiled squab for luncheon every day for one month. J. Rondeau, of New York, a butcher, was wagered that it cannot be done. Andrew Cuneo, Mrs. Cuneo's husband, who is willing to back her to the extent of $5,000 in an automobile contest against another woman, thinks his wife can do the squab eating contest and has put up the money.

Rondeau has put $200 against Cuneo's $100 that she can't. Cuneo is a wealthy New York banker. He and several other companions, in whose Rondeau is one, eat lunch regularly at the same place. Several days ago Rondeau entered the lunching place and ordered a squab. A moment later he said:

"Waiter change that order to half a squab."

The others laughed. The idea of a full grown man eating half a squab seemed to them ridiculous. The question then arose whether it would be possible for a man to eat a squab a day for a month. Rondeau thought it possible.

"I'll wager $200 against $100 that it can't be done," he said. Cuneo took him up on the wager.

"I may not be able to do it but my wife can," he said.

It was agreed and Mrs. Cuneo started in to carry out her end of the bargain. It was arranged that the friends of the backers would meet with Mrs. Cuneo at her home in Scituate when the squab should be served to Mrs. Cuneo as usual.

$5,000 BAIL IN TRENCH TRAGEDY

Martin McGuire, a contractor living at No. 184 Adams street, Dorchester, was arraigned in the South Boston District Court before Judge Fallon to-day on a charge of manslaughter in being criminally negligent in causing the deaths of Barney Kelley and Adam Marcinkiewicz, who were buried by a cave-in in a trench in South Boston yesterday.

Through his attorney, John P. Feely, McGuire waived the reading of the complaint. Captain Dugan of the bureau of criminal investigation, who prosecuted the case asked Judge Fallon for a continuance to February 2, and this was granted. McGuire was released in $5,000 bail furnished by James Burke and William Finegan.

To an AMERICAN reporter after court McGuire reiterated his statement that he believed the trench to be perfectly safe. He had full deference in the form and pressed by the Rev. Fr. Chmielinski he had planned to continue up the excavation when the fatal accident occurred.

Under Tons of Earth.

Kelley and Marcinkiewicz were buried under almost ten tons of earth when the sides of an excavation for a parochial school on Boston street, South Boston, in front of the Church of Our Lady (Polish) fell in on them. Two other workmen, Antonio Kulinicki, of No. 482 Dorchester avenue and Arthur Anderson, of No. 280 West Fourth street both of South Boston, were rescued by frantic efforts of fellow workmen, Boston police, priests and women.

The Rev. Father F. John M. Chmielinski, pastor of the church and the police say that McGuire who had the contract for the excavation had been warned several times that the drifts was unsafe without shoring. Father Chmielinski said:

"I had warned Mr. McGuire time and time again that he should shore up the trench. I even endeavored as a priest to do it might happen at any time. He told me that he was safe in the clothes as they were on the street and paid no more attention to my request. I thought the danger was over and so I left. Hardly had I gotten out on the sand when I saw sorry this thing has happened, but I hope it will at least prove a lesson to contractors not to buy the life of a man at so small a figure."

Firemen Almost Caught.

District Chief Perkins and Captain Cardwell of the fire department narrowly escaped being caught under a second cave-in while they were directing the work of rescue. Kelley's body had been dug out and it was believed he still lived. They were just about to lift the body when suddenly the sides of the bank fell, completely burying Kelley again. Perkins and Cardwell jumped to one side barely in time to prevent being caught under the tons of earth.

ORGANIZED FIGHT ON 'PHONE RATES

Representatives of the different business and civic associations throughout the manufacturing district will meet on Thursday in room No. 448, Old South Building, to effect an organized protest against the new telephone rates which were adopted yesterday by the committee on legal and legislative affairs of the United Improvement Association with instructions to the gas company to file its rate schedules in force in the Legislature to enforce the new rates. This was the first step in the campaign against the compulsory adoption of the new system.

"BIG BILL" KELIHER ARGUMENT DELAYED

The argument on the appeal of "Big Bill" Keliher did not begin in the Federal Building to-day as was expected. It may not be reached until to-morrow or the next day. The case on trial will probably take several days. It is the case of George Roukous of Providence and Joseph Adams of Rockland, Mass., who appealed from convictions in the United States Circuit Court for the Rhode Island district under indictments for concealing assets in bankruptcy.

LAFOLLETTE AGAIN ELECTED AS SENATOR

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 24.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette was to-day re-elected United States Senator by the Wisconsin Legislature for a six-year term. He arrived from Washington last night. Action on the Stephenson investigation will be delayed for a few days.

CREW BATTLE FLAMES; TWO BADLY BURNED

Two men were painfully burned and six other men had to beat back a river of flame to make their escape when a ten gallon gasoline torch exploded early to-day in the engine room of the steamship James S. Whitney of the Metropolitan line. The Whitney was tied up at India Wharf when the explosion occurred.

ESCAPED THROUGH BLAZING GASOLINE

James Manuel, boilermaker, twenty-seven years, of No. 31 Webster avenue, Chelsea, was blown across the engine room by the explosion. He was burned on the face, hands and body. He was sent to the Relief Hospital and was discharged from there later in the day.

Nevin Bunstein, chief engineer of the Whitney, living at No. 55 Glen avenue, Malden, was burned on the hands trying to rescue Manuel. He was treated at the Relief Hospital as an outpatient.

The explosion of the gasoline torch in the engine room sent blazing gasoline in all directions. Six boilermakers, working in the boiler room had to fight their way through flames to the deck compartment.

Hurled Across Room.

Manuel was employed by the Hodge Boiler Manufacturing Company of Charlestown and was one of a crew of boilermakers who were working on the James S. Whitney to patch one of the four large boilers. They were at work in the Wells room when Manuel was sent to the engine room for a gasoline torch to solder the rivets in the heavy steel plate.

The torch was prepared and Manuel started to do his work with gasoline. A small lighted hand lamp was resting on the floor of the engine room five feet away. The fumes from the gasoline torch caught fire and quickly spread to the torch, which was nearly filled. There was a deafening roar and the gasoline was hurled across the engine room, his clothing bursting into flames at the same time.

Manuel tried to tear the blazing garments from his body. Failing in this he dashed up the three flights of iron stairs and rushed to the upper deck of the vessel. Fortunately Charles McNamara caught him as he started to leap overboard and threw his coat about him.

Chief Engineer Bunstein, who had followed Manuel from the engine room, tore the burning garments from Manuel's body and in doing so was himself badly burned about the hands. Manuel was rushed over the side of the vessel to the dock and hurried to the Relief Hospital.

Six Trapped in Room.

In the meantime the noise of the explosion had aroused the entire ship. The ten gallons of gasoline spattered about the engine room in all directions, cutting off the escape of the half a dozen men in the room. Above the roar of the flames Manuel's screams and were unable to reach him, owing to the blazing oil. With lusting bags the boilermakers and ship's crew beat out the flames.

The James S. Whitney carries freight between Boston and New York and was docked at the pier for New York at 10 o'clock to-day.

MORGAN HAS FIFTH OF BANK BILLIONS

NEW YORK, Jan. 24. Figures given out by a financial person to-day show that J. Pierpont Morgan controls 20.5 per cent. of the aggregate $9,750,348,855 assets of the national banks of the country, through four national banks and seven trust companies in this city and two life insurance companies. The figures disclose that Mr. Morgan is the real dominating Napoleon in American finance. The total assets of the Morgan national banks are $450,729,409 or 4.63 per cent. of the total for the country. The assets of the seven trust companies are $427,856,000, and his insurance companies have assets of $1,125,000,000.

NOTES FO R$15,750 DECLARED FORGERIES

That notes amounting to $15,750 signed "George G Kelly" of Lowell are forgeries was the opinion of Dr. B. H. Davenport, handwriting expert, to-day in the Superior Court before Judge Mirg in Lowell. Dr. Davenport testified that the notes upon which suit is brought by Mary Lewis of Lowell against John Green are payable to Green and his wife, at whose home Mr. Kelly died. Mrs. Green is a stepdaughter of Kelly and was left an estate of $60,000 by him. After Kelly's death, it is claimed, Mr. Green found an envelope among the effects of the deceased addressed to him, which contained a letter and the promissory notes. Mrs. Lewis asks the court to declare the notes valid, and also demands that they be surrendered.

CAPTAIN BARR DIES IN LONDON

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Captain Charles Barr, the famous skipper of the yachts Reliance and Columbia when they successfully defended the America cup, died to-day of heart disease.

Captain Charlie Barr, as he was known to his many friends, was the premier jockey of the seas. Twice he held the American cup when he sailed the yachts Reliance and Columbia to victory in the International cup races, winning for himself fame and fortune. Barr, although not an American born, was an American citizen. He was born in Scotland and went to America with his brother in 1887.

After sailing a number of small yachts to victory he became mate of the Jubilee in 1893 and afterwards commanded the Vigilant in its trial races against the Defender in 1895. In 1899 he was given command of the Columbia and sailed her to victory in the races. Following his cup race victories Barr in 1900 was engaged by Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt to sail his famous sloop Rainbow. In June of last year Barr sailed the American schooner yacht Westward to victory in the race for the Krupp memorial prize, beating Emperor William's American-built yacht Meteor, with the Emperor himself at the wheel.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

CUSTOM HOUSE IS "SETTLING"

The wings of the old Custom House are settling. It is possible that these two extensions of the old structure may have to be taken down stone by stone and rebuilt. The amount that the wings have sunk into the ground is plainly visible to the eye of a layman.

Nearly every pane of glass in the wings have cracked from the settling and huge blocks of granite have pulled away. Workmen are busy to-day shoring up the two wings with great pieces of timber. The building looks to be in a serious condition.

Superintendent E. E. Hunter of the Norcross Brothers Company, which has the contract to put in the foundations under the central part of the old building on which the new tower is to be erected, said to-day:

"The wings of the building have settled, but I do not think that it is a serious matter. It is possible and highly probable that new foundations will have to be built under the wings to support them, and that, some of the granite that has cracked will have to be replaced.

"The old foundations of the wings were built on short piles, from six to seven feet long. These were sunk in five or six feet of soft ooze and a five-foot layer of thick granite masonry built upon them. When we cracked into that foundation to put into the caissons for the new foundation under the building, it weakened the whole and the wings began to settle."

The caissons under the centre of the building are to be sunk down 100 feet. They are steel tubes which are to be filled with concrete. The contract for the foundation under the centre of the building calls for it to be finished next month, but the caissons are only down to sixty-eight feet. Norcross Brothers will ask for an extension of time in which to complete their contract.

FORMER CHIEF PIDGIN ASKS STATE ANNUITY

No opposition was shown at the hearing before the Ways and Means Committee of the Legislature on the petition of Charles W. Pidgin, former chief of the State Bureau of Statistics of Labor, for an annuity from the State.

Mr. Pidgin served the State thirty-three years and is in financial straits, he says. His income from his books has gone, and though he signed off his claim for the use of his devices for $1,000 in 1909, he is still in need. Librarian Horace C. Wadlin of the public library, and Director Charles F. Getchell spoke for Mr. Pidgin.

WIGGIN NAMES DEPUTY.

THOMASTON, Me., Jan. 24.—Warden Wiggin of the Maine State Prison has announced appointment of True C. Hayford of Belfast as the deputy warden.

WED IN SECRET, ASKS DIVORCE

A college man's secret romance, with a wedding in 1905, and a divorce asked in 1911, was told in the Suffolk Divorce Court to-day. Harry E. Davey, a student at the Boston University Law School, asked Judge Mingle to grant him a decree from his wife Edna. He charges desertion. The wedding has been known to only four people. The wife, who was Miss Edna A Armstrong of No. 19 Lisbon avenue, Roxbury, is a stenographer employed by Cowen, Kingman & Swift of No. 240 Mercantile street.

Davey's story was a strange one. "We were married October 13, 1905, in Taunton," he told the Judge. "I was a student at Williams at the time, and after our marriage I went back to college and my wife continued working as a stenographer. I managed to keep the marriage a secret until I was through college. Then I got on to working, while I continued my studies.

In 1908, however, I learned that she had been married a month to my best friend. I remonstrated with her and threatened to expose the marriage to the Williams senior year. When I got my diploma I attempted to persuade her to change her mind without success."

Judge White said: "It looks as though he had tied her up with this secret marriage and didn't mind her if she lived with any one but own age. But there is no evidence that she has decided not to keep her agreement of keeping with him after his graduation from law school."

Davey then said that his wife had gone to a boarding house. He produced letters to show that she had declined to live with him after his graduation.

Herbert E. Kingman, of the firm which employs Miss Armstrong, and her brother-in-law Henry L. Vaughan, were witnesses in the case. Judge White took the case under advisement.

LIFE TERM FOR KETCHEL DEATH

MARSHFIELD, Mo., Jan. 24.—Walter Dipley and Goldie Smith were convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment to-day for the murder of Edward Ketchel, the world's champion middleweight pugilist.

Ketchel was shot October 15 on the farm of R. F. Hickman, near here, and died the same night without regaining consciousness. The Smith woman was married the same day and declared that Ketchel had died in her arms. She made an insulting remark to her husband about Dipley.

THAW ROBBED OF $35,000 IN GEMS

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 24.—The robbery of $35,000 worth of jewels from the residence of William Thaw, Jr., was reported to the police to-day. The jewels were taken last night while the family were at dinner. The jewelry included a $17,000 pearl necklace belonging to Mrs. Thaw. Mrs. Thaw and inspector Lee spent half an hour before the theft was discovered. Thirty-three detectives under the personal supervision of the chief of the bureau are working on the case, but no clue has been discovered so far.

DEMOCRAT OFFERED FOREIGN CONSULATE TO VOTE FOR LODGE

with seductive argument that this Democratic legislator would probably not be long in politics, but would presumably be in business, if he did not go on to higher political position, and that here was an opportunity for him. That Democratic vote was not either of those that was cast for Lodge.

One case is interesting in which a member, shortly before the vote, said that the election of Lodge would be a disgrace to the State, and he had been active among the anti-Lodge Republicans. He was put under tremendous corporation pressure, from the most powerful force in his district, which was a protected interest.

He did not yield to that, or had not, at the same time he made the remark. There is reason to believe that he was brought around by trading upon his public spirit. He is much interested in preventing the repeal of the bar and bottle bill and there is reason to believe that his vote was captured by an assurance of opposition to that repeal if he voted for Lodge. If Walker could have been a candidate, that vote doubtless would not have gone to Lodge in any event.

In two separate instances, which have no connection with each other, a Republican anti-Lodge man has said that the bank which held a mortgage on his house had informed him that the mortgage would be foreclosed if he did not vote for Lodge.

These statements were made in confidence and the source of information must be protected. Any one is at perfect liberty to doubt or deny if he chooses. But the statements were made with only one man between The Post correspondent and the legislators in question.

Name Sum Paid for Vote.

In addition, there are even more positive statments, saming, in one case, the sum paid for a vote, in others, indefinite amounts. It is probable that there has been solicitation on the part of corrupt members, as well as temptation from the outside. There is no evidence that would stand in court, but the facts warrant a belief in the corrupt nature of the influence to bring votes for Lodge. It is not said, in any of these cases, that there is any connection between a Lodge personality and these efforts made in his behalf. There is no instance where it has been said that there was evidence to that effect. So he is to be cleared of that as a matter of fact in the midst of these statements.

Raymond S. Bridgman was seen by an AMERICAN reporter today and, in answer to the question as to who the person was that received the offer of a foreign appointment, said:

"I have tried to make it plain in my article in the Worcester Post that this information was given me in confidence, and therefore I cannot give you the name without violating that confidence. It was understood that the communication to me was in confidence. Therefore, I refuse to be interviewed. I should be mighty glad to have the man come out and tell the whole story."

Referring to the paragraph in his article to the Worcester Post relating to the Republican legislator, who said it would be a disgrace to the State to elect Senator Lodge and who afterwards voted for him, Mr. Bridgman said:

"The remark was made after the election of Lodge by a Republican, which is not a part of this story, that his vote for Lodge was the most repugnant of anything he ever did."

REV. MEYERS SCORES LODGE SCANDAL IN ADDRESS AT TEMPLE

The Rev. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, in the course of his sermon on Sunday, discussed the Lodge senatorial scandal. He declared that he should think that the guilty doors of the State House would cave in, if all the facts should come in after what had taken place there in the election of Lodge. The Rev. Dr. Myers said:

"After what took place this week I should think that the dome of the State House would cave in. It will take a long time to wipe out this stain on the fair name of Massachusetts.

"To think that money can be used to the extent that it was this week to put men in public office, and that right here in Massachusetts, a State which has stood in the forefront in many reform measures, is a great surprise to me.

Disgrace to Civilization.

"I wonder what some of the forefathers would say to this action. When it seems doubtful to elect a certain person about whom there has been more or less mingling, the monied forces rally around him in all hands. Before we know it they control the situation, and are able to elect the man they desire.

"I condemn this method. There are certain monied interests, when things go dark for them in the political situation and they see they can not elect their candidate in the regular way, who begin to talk money. They use it extensively to gain their point.

"I say all this is a disgrace to our Christian civilization. To buy votes is disgraceful in any State, city or town. As I was a representative man in any public local position and knew that my election had been bought for me, I would immediately resign and tell the offenders so. If it be true that Henry Cabot Lodge has been elected by monied interests, I say shame on the name of Massachusetts until he lets all self-respecting people know about it.

Whole Country Watching.

"How he can stand up in Congress and represent the people when he knows his position has been bought and paid for.

"This is a serious matter. The whole country is watching it. The Chilcoln church will not countenance it. Every self-respecting person will shake his head in no uncertain way at this effort to get a seat bearing so much shame in Massachusetts by a scouding brass and a blazing gradient.

"We must be honest. Let us elect our Senators by straightforward means, so that when they stand in the halls of Congress they will have no qualms of conscience and be glad not be ashamed.

"If these things are true about the election of Lodge and I have seen no denial of them—I do not see how he can look any one in the eye and accept congratulations.

"I call upon the Christian churches of the land to get in the van of the moral progress of the world. The church must be loud to these live issues. It bears too directly upon the welfare of the people.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS Up to Midnight London Time

Libel on British King to Be Tried in Public.

LONDON—The AMERICAN learns tonight that the trial of Mylius, the agent in England of E. H. James's Liberator, and who is now in Buxton jail on a charge of seditious libel, will be held at the High Courts on February 1. It had been generally expected that the case would be heard at the Old Bailey, and its transference to the High Courts indicates the extraordinary importance which the authorities attach to the case. The trial will be held before a jury, and the whole allegations made by James in the Liberator concerning King Edward's morganatic marriage will be heard in public, as Mylius refuses to apologize.

12 Fly in Biggest Airship.

BERLIN—The world's biggest airship had a trial flight from the shed built by Siemens, & Schuckert. The flight was short, but it demonstrated that the airship was satisfactory in every respect. The ship is non-rigid and 387 feet long and of 500 horse-power. The gas bag has a capacity of 13,000 cubic feet. Suspended from it are three cars, the rear one of which can carry fifty passengers. The others are occupied by the machinery. Twelve persons made the flight.

Lipton's Visitor Under Scrutiny.

LONDON—The man who entered the residence of Sir Thomas Lipton in Southgate on Saturday and after drawing a razor made a demand for money was arraigned before Mr. Justice of Lunacy in Edmonton Workhouse. The man said he was Albert Weldon, twenty-eight years old, a ship's steward and a native of South Africa. The magistrate ordered him kept under observation for seventeen days.

Diplomats Alarmed by Plague.

PEKIN—Owing to the prevalence of the bubonic plague the colonies in the European quarter of the city has been proposed, but certain of the ministers object. It is likely that those who opposed the closing will see, as they have the sympathy of the Chinese high officials, who seem amused by the fears of those who have appealed to have the quarter isolated.

Aeroplane Afire in Air.

COPENHAGEN—Svendsen, the Danish aviator, while flying in a Voisin aeroplane, heard spectators shouting. Looking around he saw that flames were bursting from the framework of the aeroplane. Descending as quickly as possible, he reached the earth just in time to avoid a serious disaster. The machine was destroyed.

Hurry Call for U. S. Gunboat.

HANKOW, China—American Consul-General Robert Brent Mosher sent a request to his government asking that a gunboat be hurried to this port to protect American interests in the event of a continuation of the fatal anti-foreign rioting that began yesterday.

Mme. Curie Defeated by Man.

PARIS—Mme. Curie, who with her late husband, Pierre Curie, discovered radium, lost her election to the Academy of Sciences by M. Branly, who received one vote more than the number cast for the woman candidate on the second ballot.

Peru Rebels Awaiting Attack.

LIMA—The insurgents to the south are massed on the heights of Tayabamba, where they are awaiting attack by the government troops, who have been pursuing them.

GET IN $35,000 CONTEST

These are the days to make hay while the sun shines!

The AMERICAN'S $35,000 prize contest represents an epoch in the world of newspaper enterprise, and the unparalleled activity with which the residents of New England have entered the competition assures it the most phenomenal success ever achieved in an undertaking along this line.

The first prize is an $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton, Mass., directly opposite Newton, on the Charles river boulevard and facing the Charles River. This dwelling, which goes to the one who obtains the greatest number of votes, is absolutely unencumbered, and the title to it will be fully assured.

Automobiles and Power Boats.

For the awarding of the other prizes, New England is divided into seven districts. To the ones obtaining the greatest number of votes in these districts will be awarded valuable prizes, such as 1911 touring automobiles, pianos and speed power boats, and enough other prizes of great value to make 1,000 prizes in all, to be given absolutely free to AMERICAN readers.

Vote coupons appear in every issue of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. The daily coupon counts for one vote. The Sunday coupon counts for ten votes. Get as many of these as you can, and get them in before two weeks after the date they appear in the AMERICAN.

The best way to pile up thousands of votes is to take advantage of the special vote credits which will be allowed for guaranteed subscriptions. Full details of this GUARANTEE PLAN will be found in an announcement on another page of today's AMERICAN.

DE LESSEPS TO WED TOMORROW

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A real aviation romance will culminate tomorrow when Count Jacques de Lesseps of France will be married to Miss Grace Mackenzie, a beautiful Toronto, Canada, girl. Most of the prominent members of French, American, Canadian and English society will attend the nuptials at St. James' Church. Sir William Mackenzie, who was awarded for the knighthood because of his services in developing Canadian railroads, arrived here to-day, accompanied by Lady Mackenzie.

Count de Lesseps met Miss Mackenzie last Fall when he visited Canada. She attended the international aviation tournament at Belmont Park, New York, and made several flights with him. Count de Lesseps was one of the trio to make the statue of Liberty flight over Brooklyn. He is the son of the builder of the Suez Canal, and his father was one of the starters of the Panama Canal. After a honeymoon in Egypt the Count and Countess will reside in Paris. One of the stipulations of the marriage is that the aviator shall not attempt any dangerous aeroplane flights in the future.

DRAPERS SAIL FOR TOUR OF THE TROPICS

Ex-Governor Eben S. Draper and his daughter, Dorothy, sailed to-day from New York for a month's tour of the Bermudas, the Panama Canal and Porto Rico. The trip is made to give Miss Draper a long sea voyage.

ROBERTA DEJÁNON, ELOPING HEIRESS, WHO IS TO MARRY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—A marriage license has been issued for Stephen Glaser, twenty-four years old of New York and Miss Roberta Buist DeJanon, eighteen years old, supposed to be the Philadelphia heiress who late in 1909 eloped with Frederick Cohen, a bald headed waiter three times her own age who left his own wife in Philadelphia. It is not known whether the marriage of the DeJanon girl and Glaser has taken place. The couple cannot be found. The girl has been on the coast for some time. No one here seems to have any knowledge of Glaser's antecedents.

The elopement of the DeJanon girl, who was then seventeen, with Cohen, the Bellevue-Stratford waiter, created a sensation. Robert Buist, grandfather and adoptive father of the girl, offered to spend a fortune in finding the runaways. They were discovered in Chicago, the girl was brought back home defiant, and the waiter was prosecuted for abduction. The girl, however, took her entire responsibility for the elopement.

Robert Buist died last December leaving $500,000 in trust for his adopted daughter.

MRS. SCHENK BREAKS DOWN

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 24.—Sailing under the scathing denunciation of Assistant Prosecutor Fred L. Maury, Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk to-day watched her trial on the charge of attempting to poison her husband draw to a close. Continuing his argument where it was broken off by adjournment of court yesterday, Mr. Maury painted Mrs. Schenk as a woman who betrayed her husband and then attempted to end his life.

While the prosecutor denounced her, Mr. Schenk opened a number of letters which she had received in the early mail and smiled as she made notes on the borders of some of them. At the close of the prosecutor's address she conferred for a short time with Frank O'Brien, one of her counsel, and then settled back with a half sneer on her lips while the arraignment continued.

Prosecutor Maury announced that he would conclude his speech within a short time, but the other addresses probably will prevent the case from going to the jury before late to-morrow. Shortly before Mrs. Schenk appeared in court a deputy sheriff chased away a number of men who were making wagers at the door of the courthouse on the outcome of the trial.

Odds Favor Mrs. Schenk.

Odds of 25 to 10 were offered against a verdict of guilty; even money was offered either for or against a disagreement of the jury and 9 to 10 was given against a verdict of "Not guilty." Several thousand dollars is already tied up in wagers, it is said.

When Prosecutor Handlan concluded his speech with an analytical discussion of the medical testimony given by both State and defence and declared that the charges aimed at by the prosecution had been fully proved, he urged the jury to find a verdict of guilty.

"This woman was so degraded that she would take her children on auto rides with her and Dan Phillips—such a woman should not be termed loose into the society of Ohio County and the country at large," he declared.

After Maury's arraignment of Mrs. Schenk was concluded, Mr. O'Brien immediately started his argument for the defense and the lawyer spoke of the pathetic position which Mrs. Schenk occupied in the home of her husband, the defendant broke down and sobbed. The calmness which she had shown under the bitter arraignment of the prosecutor disappeared.

Sobs From the Prisoner.

After picturing Mrs. Schenk as a persecuted woman, his speech being punctuated by heavy sobs from the defendant who bowed her head into her hands, Mr. O'Brien pleaded with the jury not to convict her on circumstantial evidence, which he held up as frequently having been the cause of grave legal errors.

He ridiculed the testimony of the State's doctors, attacking their evidence as being contradictory and declaring that they differed did not believe that Schenk was suffering from lead or arsenical poison, but later that this suggestion was made to them and quickly eliminated. As the argument continued Mrs. Schenk partially recovered her composure.

O'Brien made a masterful speech, characterizing Mrs. Kline, the detective-nurse, as a "sneaking, abominable, spying little wretch, who worked her way into the confidence of Mrs. Schenk and then, failing to find out anything, deliberately lied." He made a sharp attack on the methods of the State in its employment of Pittsburg detectives.

M'CURDY READY TO FLY TO CUBA

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 24.—The longest aeroplane flight over sea in the history of aviation will start from here at 7 o'clock to-morrow morning if the weather is favorable, when J. A. D. McCurdy will commence his 110-mile trip to Cuba.

The final arrangements were completed by Mr. McCurdy and those assisting him to-day. The torpedo destroyers and other vessels that will be anchored ten miles apart to guide the aviator will depart to-night, the first vessel dropping anchor thirty miles from Grand Keys. The direction will be guided by the smoke from the funnels of the ships, and after passing the last of the line he will make an air line dash toward Havana. The quantity of fuel necessary to propel the machine has been ascertained by trial flights. The start will be made from Fleming Island, and the 90 miles Atlantic, although near by, will flash ahead of the 20 knot machine to the other ships.

The Cuban revenue cutter, Betsey, will meet the aeroplane ten miles off the Cuban coast. Ground crowds are pouring into Key West to watch the start.

Splendid for Old People

When the human system declines the accumulated poisons in the blood cause rheumatic pains in the joints, muscles and back. These warnings should be promptly relieved and serious illness avoided by using the following prescription, which shows wonderful results even after the first few doses. It will eventually restore physical vigor. "One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound, half pint of high grade whiskey. This to be mixed and used in tablespoonful doses before each meal and at bed time. The bottle to be shaken each time." Any druggist has these ingredients or will quickly get them for you. Any one can mix them.

This treatment has the double effect of rheumatism eradicator and system builder. A prominent local druggist states that this prescription is commonly being called. Those who have tried it are enthusiastic over the results.

MISS RESTARICK COMING TO WED PAUL WITHINGTON

MISS CONSTANCE RESTARICK

Miss Constance Restarick, daughter of Bishop H. B. Restarick of Honolulu, who is coming all the way to Boston to wed Paul Withington, manager of athletics at Harvard College, is visiting her old friends in California where she first met Withington, and it is expected that in a short time she will come East. The date of the wedding has not been announced, but it will occur in Boston in the early Spring, it is said.

Miss Restarick made the trip from Honolulu on the Pacific liner, Korea. She stopped in San Francisco a short time and then went to Southern California, where she formerly lived. She is a childhood friend of the Harvard athlete. He kept up his acquaintance although thousands of miles away.

Miss Restarick is an accomplished musician and vocalist, and has won a rowing and tennis championship. She has a few friends in Boston, among them the Rev. Frederick B. Allen of No. 132 Marlboro street.

BOSTON WOMEN IN D'AULBY BOOK

PARIS, Jan. 24.—In the American colony here the news that "count" Daulby, art faker and husband of the former Miss Francesca Lunt of Boston, is going to write his memoirs is being received with significant winks and smiles. French society also, and especially the art world, is manifesting an anticipatory interest in the life story of the London tailor's son who masqueraded as a count as told by himself.

The Duchess de Frasilh-Chaboril, formerly Mrs. Charles Hamilton Paine of Boston is much interested in the proposed book. The duchess recently accused Daulby of stealing a sizable jewel and her former husband, a reputedly keen American business man, out of more than $200,000 by means of alleged "real estate."

The trial at Tours was one of the most sensational in French legal history. Madame Daulby also was arrested. Daulby feared the duchess to abandon the prosecution, by his revelations of a tender passion between her and himself, but was found guilty and sentenced to a nominal imprisonment. His wife was acquitted.

That Daulby in his memoirs will devote considerable space to American women and his relations with the former Mrs. Paine is certain. It is whispered about among his intimates that other women prominent in Paris and America also will be mentioned, and that the secrets of successful art faking will be exposed.

Speaking of his book, Daulby says:

"I've got no more money, so I must think of earning a living for my wife and children. I am going to accept the offer of a friend, who has proposed that I go into a bank with him. I shall have a position in the bank of which he is a director. In the meantime I am writing my memoirs in order that the world may know the whole truth about my life, for I owe this to the honor of my wife and children."

Daulby lives in a chateau near Tours belonging to a friend, Duval de Moratry.

SEARS GIVES LECTURE.

WIFE A TARGET FOR FRIED EGGS

James Costello, who has charge of the pool and billiard room in a Back Bay hotel, is entitled to the blue ribbon for quick temper, in the opinion of his wife, who is suing for divorce on the grounds of cruelty. She told Judge White to-day that James started in a month after they were married on January 9, 1906.

Mrs. Costello gave the exact date as February 8. On the night previous she said he asked her to call him early. She did so and finally her husband got up and by ways of thanks slapped her.

In the following March, she said, he beat her "good." She left him and went to live with her mother, but Costello persuaded her to kiss and make up. After a few days he became interested in a new form of sport, throwing various articles at her, the game being to see how near he could come without hitting her. His initial attempt was with a cup of coffee, but as it struck her on the neck, Mr. Costell decided he had lost the game.

The next time fried eggs and coffee again landed squarely on his wife's face.

Mrs. Costello also told of her husband's threat to drown her "like a rat in a bathtub," and also his knocking her down and threatening to kill her with his best razor.

Judge White took the case under advisement.

INFANT MORTALITY ONE IN SEVEN IN HUB INSTITUTIONS

The mortality of babies in institutions is the great problem of Boston. Some institutions lose one out of seven children, some one out of eight. There are institutions that have a death rate of from 33 to 50 per cent, when the death rate should be zero.—From address by W. E. Kruesi to Baby Hygiene Association.

FIRE IN FREIGHT CAR.

SON-IN-LAW OF CANNON FLEES

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 24.—With Michael Guynot, a cousin of Mayor Guynor of New York, summoned to testify in the grand jury inquiry of the vote-selling scandal in Vermillion County and the sudden departure of E. X. Leseure, son-in-law of Joseph G. Cannon, a new sensation was sprung here to-day. It was reported that Leseure had been hastily summoned to Washington, although a servant at the house declared that his destination was unknown. Whether he would remain away from the city until after the inquiry closes was problematical when the jury met again to-day.

Leseure was not under subpoena, but it was said he was to have been called. Frank L. Jones, city attorney; J. C. Mercer, W. C. Thompson and Harry Frodsham, politicians, and W. J. Parret and W. J. Mathews, newspapermen, were expected to testify to-day with Guynor. More than forty others have been subpoened, but likely will not have a chance to testify during the week, as the Grand Jury expects to conduct a thorough examination of all witnesses. Apparently the scandal is growing, and Judge Kimbrough, who started the inquiry with a charge to the Grand Jury, confessed he did not know how far it would go.

The bill provides a permanent tariff board of five members, each member to serve six years. The chairman is to have a salary of $7,500 annually and the other members $7,000 per year.

SEEK FUND FOR NEW TECH SITE

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 24. — Prominent business men and members of the Connecticut Valley Alumni Association of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have begun a campaign to raise $3,000,000 and secure thirty acres of land to defray the expense of removing and providing a site for the Institute in this city.

Prominent members of the alumni are of the opinion that the removal of the Institute of Technology from Boston would result in turning into local channels of trade about $2,000,000 a year, if the 2,000 students of the institute were residents of Springfield.

Plan Banquet Saturday.

The Alumni Association has arranged for a banquet here next Saturday night, when President Maclaurin will speak upon the removal of the institute and its value as an asset to the city.

The Alumni Association has issued a circular letter, in part as follows:

"The institute is greatly in need of money and is endeavoring to secure from the State of Massachusetts an annual appropriation of $100,000 in place of the $25,000 received heretofore, the ten year grant of which now expires. The popularity of the institute is greater than ever for years it has sought to push out into new and urgently demanded fields of usefulness and honor, but its income has not warranted the extension.

"Every student costs the institution about twice what is received from the present fee of $250 per year. The Massachusetts students alone cost about $200,000 per year more than they pay. The faster the institute grows the poorer it grows.

Urge Alumni to Get Together.

"Tech has been forging ahead on the slenderest means and doing magnificent work for this State and all the world.

"We must get together and let the State see how strong a body the Tech men are in this valley alone.

"Tech needs from us a vigorous mass play and here is the point for it. We shall have as our guest, with President Maclaurin, J. W. Litchfield and Jasper Whiting of the Technology committee in charge of legislation, Charles C. Pierce '84 of Boston, a prominent alumnus, and other men of force and importance."

GOODWIN SAD AT WIFE'S SUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Nat Goodwin, in his dressing room at the Colonial Theatre, looked more distressed over his wife's divorce action than did Mrs. Goodwin when testifying at the court hearing before Referee J. Campbell Thimpson at No. 65 Wall street. In fact, Goodwin was so depressed that when questioned he would only say:

"I don't want to comment upon the divorce case. I want to let the other side do all the talking—they seem to be capable."

He had just come off the stage, where he had been playing "Lend Me Five Shillings," an old play, which he once used as a curtain raiser.

On account of rehearsals, his attorney said he was unable to attend the secret hearing. Mrs. Goodwin went to the hearing with her mother fifteen minutes before.

Last time Mrs. Goodwin broke out the declaration of his friends—"Nat is certainly a good judge when it comes to beauty in wives." There seems to be no chance of a reconciliation except in terms of alimony. On Friday the hearing will be continued.

TOBACCO SCANDAL DOESN'T TOUCH HUB

Replying to the charge that the government was being defrauded by the importation of Havana leaf tobacco for wrappers under the classification of "filers" to the extent of from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually, Captain William H. H. Rideout, inspector of cigars at the Boston Customs House, to-day declared that no Havana wrappers were used by the New England cigar manufacturers. Captain Rideout has inspected cigars at the Boston Customs House for forty-six years.

FIGHT FOR SON HE ABANDONED

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 24.—Now a pillar of the church in Seattle, Wash., and prominent, William H. Heckbert, an attorney, who, as he admitted in the Supreme Court to-day, deserted his wife and three children in this city three years ago, has counseled to attempt to obtain the custody of his son Donald, five years old. When he left this city he was as he puts it, "financially embarrassed." He has prospered in the law business in Seattle and the death of his deserted wife a year ago gave him the opportunity to marry again. Heckbert appealed from the decision of the Probate Court, which last April gave the child to Arthur C. Leadbetter, a milk dealer of this city.

In October, 1908, Heckbert's wife, who was Ethel I. McDonald, a young society woman of South Portland, obtained a divorce on the grounds of non-support. In January of the following year, she dropped dead during a dance at a charity ball.

In his testimony to-day Heckbert claimed that he had not heard of his wife's death until four months ago. The two little girls were cared for by relatives and friends and the boy, with the consent of Mrs. Heckbert's mother-in-law, was adopted by the Leadbetters.

Heckbert went from here to Seattle where he has a brother, and opened a law office. He soon prospered and now displays credentials from leading citizens and the Rev. J. M. Wilson, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Seattle, showing that he had a large income and that is an officer of the church. A year after he married a Seattle woman who was a teacher in the Sunday school in the church he attended.

Wilford G. Chapman, counsel for Heckbert, argued to-day that the Probate Court of this county had no authority to decree the adoption of the child, since when the mother died the boy's custody reverted to the father. Mrs. Leadbetter, when asked if she couldn't give up the boy, broke down and wept and said she could not bear to part with him. The court reserved decision.

PROMINENT ELK AIDING PLANS FOR THE CHARITY BALL

JAMES H. VAHEY

Everything indicates that the Elks' Charity Ball, one of the brilliant annual functions of Boston, which takes place to-morrow evening in Symphony Hall, will outdo anything of the kind that this body has ever attempted.

Unique features of the evening's entertainment which are intended as a setter prize for those in attendance are promised. There will be plenty of the very best dance and concert music obtainable. It is expected that the hall will be crowded, as the demand for tickets has been greater than the committee in charge of the affair anticipated.

PETERS DEFENDS BRIBERY CASES

LAWRENCE, Jan. 24.—The so-called Lawrence bribery cases took on a new phase to-day when Attorney Fred H. Tilton, from the office of former District Attorney W. Scott Peters of Haverhill, appeared in court in behalf of the defendants, who are charged with larceny and intent to commit larceny. At Tilton's request, Judge Mahoney granted a continuance until Wednesday.

District Attorney Peters, who will now defend James H. Hershfield and Fred L. Snow, both of Lowell, on the charge of larceny of $1,270.80, prosecuted ex-Mayor William F. Wood and his colleagues in the wholesale graft cases of last year. Having relinquished his connection with the District Attorney's office, he is now on the other side of the fence.

When the two defendants appeared in court to-day they presented a united front against them, both being charged with intent to steal an additional $2,538.38 from the city of Lawrence on paving blocks never delivered to the city. The two defendants will be called upon to plead to the two new charges when they are arraigned Wednesday.

The charge against Hershfield and Snow is that they collected from the city of Lawrence $1,270.80 for paving blocks which were never delivered. It is alleged that the money was ordered paid on the November draft and was actually paid December 12 1910. The new charge is that in December the two defendants got in a check for $1,270.80 and endorsed to collect $107.38 of that amount on the December draft.

In court to-day were many prominent officials. These men were held in $500 bail to appear as witnesses next Wednesday. Milton O. Sargent, a special agent of the Boston & Maine railroad; George A. Leonard, manager of the New England Granite Company at Concord, N. H.; Burris A. Jenney of Newton, a quarry owner; John P. Kane, Democratic municipal boss for city treasurer; Phillip Holland, a local contractor; Joseph Spencer, former councilman, and Patrick J. Lyons, superintendent of streets.

NEW CLEW TO WHITTIER GIRL

The latest plew to the whereabouts of Miss Florence Eva Whittier, the nineteen-year-old girl who disappeared mysteriously from Boston a week ago last Friday, comes from Albany, where a railroad conductor says he thinks he saw her last Sunday. Her father, Maynard Whittier of Ipswich, said to-day last night there might be something in this clew.

"I don't believe this Albany clew as I have run down every clew that has come to me," he said. "There was no reason that I knew of why Florence should go to Albany but the telephone message which I got from the conductor was of such a positive character that I am hopeful that it will amount to something."

MAINE SEEKS "DIRECT" LAW

The appeal for names began in Portland to-day. While many members of both parties favor the bill it is understood that the leaders will theretire if possible. William R. Pattangall, the acknowledged leader of the Democratic majority on the floor of the House, is bitterly opposed. Mr. Pattangall, too, is chairman of the judiciary committee. It is expected that the petition will be sent to the House by the first of next week.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 24.—Fearing that a bill for a "direct primary" law will not get beyond the judiciary committee of the Legislature the supporters of the bill will appeal to the initiative clause of the act passed in 1907.

SCORES AFTER POSTS ON BENCH

Governor Foss is not embarrassed by a lack of aspirants for the places on the Superior Court bench made vacant by the death of Judge Paul W. Bond and the resignation of Judge Robert G. Harris, elected to Congress from the Fourteenth District. Already he has had a score of names submitted to him and others are coming.

Following out this "painless, periodical publicity" program, Governor Foss has announced the names submitted to him for appointment to these judicial positions and more are coming. Among those already before the Governor are: Judge Joseph F. Corbett of Charlestown, John D. McLaughlin, assistant corporation counsel of the city of Boston, ex-Senator James H. Vahey, ex-Mayor John W. Cummings of Fall River, ex-District Attorney Michael J. Sugrue, David I. Walsh of Clarksburg, Henry C. O'Connell of Worcester, Henry C. Cushing-ham, chairman of the State Ballot Law Commission; , Chief Justice Alfred Hemenway of the Municipal Court, Edmund A. Whitman, James P. Sweeney, James E. Cotter, Chairman Fred J. Macleod of the Democratic State Committee, Judge Edward B. Burke, Greenville S. MacFarlands and John E. Ratigan of Worcester, candidate for attorney-general on the ticket with Governor Foss. It is understood the appointments will be made shortly.

WOMAN AND DAUGHTER SAVED FROM FLAMES

Mrs. Concetto Mangannoro and her four-year-old daughter, Natalie, were rescued by a policeman, and five other persons, living in the two-and-a-half-story wooden dwelling at No. 10 Merrimac street, fled in the street early today when fire caused a loss and damage of $2000 in the second-hand store of Joseph Sandler, on the first floor.

Patrolman Albert R. Peterson of the Joy street station discovered flames in the rear of the store. He burst open the door leading to the rooms overhead and ran up the stairs. The upper part of the house was filled with smoke. Asleep in the title he found Mrs. Mangannoro and her daughter, Natalie. Seizing both in his arms he carried them to the street.

IF DEBILITATED YOU NEED A NEW SUPPLY OF BLOOD

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Unequalled As a Blood-Builder And Will Cure You As They Did This Sufferer.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in general debility lies in their direct response to the needs of the blood. Their work is to make new blood. That they do this well is shown by the gradual disappearance of the symptoms and the return of color and health. They lay the foundation for permanent health in the future.

Mr. Peter Haff of No. 108 Ferry street, Hoboken, N. J., who was in a run-down condition, was induced to try with the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He says:

"I was in poor health for three months following a severe cold and was confined to bed for a day or two at a time. There was a terrible soreness through the small of my back which often prevented me from straightening up. My kidneys were affected, my head ached occasionally and I was unable so get much sleep. I had no appetite and was generally run down.

"I was under a doctor's care for a time but gave up his treatment to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon the advice of a friend. They soon helped me and after a thorough trial I was so improved that I could go to work. I was completely cured and recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills very highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were originally a prescription used in the doctor's private practice and their benefit to mankind has been increased many thousand-fold by their being placed on general sale with the doctor's own direction for use. They contain the elements necessary to make new blood and, as the nerves get their nourishment from the blood, have been found invaluable in a wide range of diseases of the blood and nerves. A helpful pamphlet, "Diseases of the Blood" will be sent free on request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, 6 boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. These pills are sold only in packages bearing the well-known trademark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." MAUDE ADAMS A 'ROOSTER-HAMLET'

Rostand's "Chantecler" Has Its First Performance in the English Language.

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—"It seems very pretty," said Alice in Wonderland, on a famous occasion, "but it's rather hard to understand. Somehow it seems to fill my head with ideas—only I don't exactly know what they are!"

I should have liked Alice to be with me at the Knickerbocker Theatre, packed to its very sounding-board, to see Rostand's big poultry epique, "Chantecler," produced for the first time in this country, as a gorgeous spectacular attraction.

It was Mr. Charles Frohman's Empress energy that brought Rostand's poultry salmi to these expectant ears, and there was no chance to see what Paris tried so hard, and so artistically, and so unsuccessfully to appreciate. "Chantecler" was produced last night, after it had been paved and oiled all over the land for months—killed by hyper and super advertisement, as most good things are here.

Play Is in English.

However, the novelty was the fact that "Chantecler" is here given in the vain glorious person who believes that the sun rises for him only. And in the big act, "Le Jour de la Fête Dieu," when all the roosters and hens make things hot for Chantecler, as they preen, and strut and crow and attitudinize, they all seem more like human actors than any play in poultry.

They are "knocking" the great star, they are "tousting" the soul-lighted bird. They all feel they could do better themselves; that for each of them the sun really might rise. And last night one felt that the gorgeous, the eccentric surroundings, the bargard accessories and costumes were really "playing themselves" in the thin disguise of roosters.

But by the time that act was reached we had become accustomed to the feathers and the masquerade. They had ceased to be ridiculous, and they had simply fitted when it sing gui in white appeared before the curtain to speak the prologue. It was uttered in Paris by Coquelin. It was Maude Adams before, giving her public a chance to see the woman speak, but his lines were not alluring.

Chantecler scampered her.

It was Maude Adams of the enchanting smile, the unanalyzable charm, and the lovely, mentioning voice, who spoke the prologue with all the grace of her undying girlhood. The rough bitterness to the stage hands that a man should be given a play with pretty capacities, as Miss Adams expressed them.

Lost in the Character.

But it was a good idea. As subsequent events proved, it was a great idea. For when Miss Adams, the girl we know, disappeared, it was the last we saw of her. After that, she was Chantecler, and Chantecler swamped every iota of her personality.

At first the strange surroundings seem, with its cocks and hens, its dog, its cat, its blackbird, its chickens, its owls, butterflies, and guinea pig, dazzled us into public as some kind of a circus-like spectacle. The appearance of each bird was greeted with birth. Every little move of the actors could be seen.

In the case of Arthur Byron, who played Patch, the dog, even the face was hidden. There was, there could be, no gesticulation. On came all the gorgeous feathered ones, strutting, posing, always preening—real actors!

The novelty of the garb wore off. The language, the slightness of it all, became necessary to one's sanity. They absolutely lost, this began by being so exceedingly cunning, very much like the suggestion of the old English pantomimes, that nobody took it quite seriously.

"It seems very pretty," as Alice in Wonderland remarked, "only it's rather hard to understand. Somehow it seems to fill my head with ideas—only I don't exactly know what they are."

A Delightful Hen Pheasant.

However, as "Chantecler" progressed, and as the delightful Hen Pheasant appeared on the perfumed heroine—the Ophelia to Chantecler Hamlet—there was some dawn of dramatic interest about the opulent, of course, on the trappings. These, which were constant surprises, kept us all good and busy. The pictures were lovely and impressive. Mr. Frohman had tended to the scenarity (?) of the occasion. It was a triumph of detail. The barnyard sounds, sights and doings were all festival-like in their novelty.

So, all this point of view changed. Even the Cock's address to the Rising Sun sank into sheer indigestibleness by the sight of the plentiful dawn itself—the flood of light illuminating the darkness in which the Owls had blinked. Louis Parker's translation or adaptation of this declamatory epic-lyric was not nearly as satisfactory as Mr. Frohman's leap to the scenic necessities. The English was banal and uninspiring. It left one tame and cold. Sometimes it was unintelligible. Always one seemed, like Alice in Wonderland, to be savoring new ideas and not to know what they were.

Only a Mild Appeal.

And so it went on—spectacularly odd and picturesque to the eye but not nudely elevating to the intelligence. The little story of Samson in the nets of Delilah—of Chantecler losing his prowess in the fascinations of the Hen Pheasant—made a mild appeal.

What would it have been without the settings, and the gay equipment, and the feathered eccentricity of it all? Chantecler-Hamlet, like most soliloquizing gentlemen who decline to the heavens, liked to hear himself speak, but his lines were not alluring.

When I saw the play in Paris, I couldn't help thinking that if Rostand had possessed the lovely, fantastic, child-like ideas of "Aliece" author, "Wonderland" would have been a thing of joy.

An occasional line of satire, an infrequent whiff of philosophy blew into the general aridity of the thing. But it happened so seldom. Much of it sounded like the famous:

'Twas brillig and the slithy toves
Did gare and gimble in the wabe.

It though it seemed such a lot of lovely things, but—what was it?

Just Maude Adams.

Miss Adams, having disappeared as the moonbeamish girl, reappeared as Chantecler. She was an odd and a vivid Chantecler. She was not the blatant, vainglorious, mouthing bird dallying with the rising sun that floated intended. She was primitive, pathetic, wistful. She was Maude Adams. All illusion vanished. This was no more Chantecler than it could have been Romeo or Hamlet. It was absolutely essential for any other—for that "Chantecler" could claim that this role should be masculine and super-masculine. Miss Adames' charm, her delightful voice, her exquisite personality, her gift of pathos, her sense of humor, her delicacy, her grace, her tenderness, her sympathy, her magnetism, her—all these things are feminine. Her little actress lifted herself by an almost superhuman effort, but—she couldn't quite reach it. Instead of the rampant, purse-proud, cock-valiant Chantecler one saw a sweet little feminine bird trying to assume virility, but swamped by her lingering charms. All lovers of Maude Adams must admit this, and nobody has ever loved her as I have done. If Chantecler moved nothing, its meaning was completely removed. It became a pretty, feminine escapade.

Miss Blaney the Real Hit.

The hit of the performance was achieved, not by Miss Adams, but by Miss May Blaney, who as the Hen Pheasant was irresistible. This was the real delight of the barnyard. From the moment she entered until she left us, the Hen Pheasant captivated and charmed. It was utter femininity in the right place.

Chantecler was utter femininity in the wrong place. So, in the scenes between these two, a Hen Pheasant whose poetry "got" us; it was the Hen Pheasant whose dainty bird-like personality we saw in front. But the Blackbird in Paris seemed to be a very much better part than it was last night. What a pity! Did Mr. Louis Parker take liberties with Rostand's text? It was a fine cast throughout—and that it mattered. Any actors could play these parts.

Maude Adams as the Chantecler.

Piece Is Well Cast.

Mr. Frohman, however, took no chances. He had Dorothy Dorr as the Guinea Hen, Margaret Gordon as the White Hen, William Lewers as the Peacock, Peyton Carter as the Turkey Cock, Fred Tyler as the Woodpecker, and so on. Plunged in the sense of exhaustion, these actors all spoke their lines well and sincerely. All that could be done for "Chantecler" was done.

But as a "classic," "Chantecler" will be unremembered, while "Cyrano de Bergerac" lives and breathes. As literature "Chantecler" will be forgotten, while "L'Aiglon" grows dusty on the bookshelves. We are glad to have seen it. Everybody will be glad to have seen it. Everybody should see it as a curio.

The drama of human life will not be unseated by the vagaries of mascerading poultry and the barnyard will take no abiding hold on either the dramatic or poetic affections.

But it did seem very pretty, and it was rather hard to understand, so I did seem to fill my head with ideas, but I don't exactly know what they are.

ROBIN IN COURT BLAMES MORGAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Joseph G. Robin, skyrocket financier and former head of the defunct Northern Bank, declared on the witness stand at the hearing of bankruptcy proceedings against him today before United States Commissioner Alexander that J. P. Morgan was the man who was really responsible for the closing of the Northern Bank, the Washington Savings Bank and the Carnegie Trust Company. Robin talked disconnectedly at times and chatted vaguely at dark plots of which he said Clark William's superintendent of banks, knew something.

The proceedings today in which Robin was taken from the Tombs to the Federal building to appear as a witness were begun by Edgar M. Sander, receiver for the Bankers Realty and Security Company and the Railway Traction Construction Company, both of which are alleged to have been wrecked by Robin. R. S. Nicolls, attorney for Alexander, conducted the examination. Before it was begun Robin walked over to where several newspaper men were sitting and said:

"They say I'm crazy. Don't I'm not half so crazy as the general public is. You boys get things as you ought to."

He then started into say that the lay of politics in Rollins with Morgan. Mr. Nicholls is connected, had had dealings with the State banking department when Commissioner Alexander opened the case.

SCOTCH HIGHBALLS GO UP INSTEAD OF DOWN

Treating to Scotch highballs begins to look like thirty cents at last.

The time-honored price for "Scotch highballs" has been a quarter of a dollar for two bits. When the increase in duty on whiskey went into effect some months ago it was reported that the price for the different drinks would be three cents all the way, whether for one or a thousand.

Now Uncle Sam is going to put a countervailing duty of nine cents a gallon more on Irish and Scotch whiskies—the cents a gallon is two and one-quarter cents a quart. That makes a corresponding fraction of a cent as the increased cost of a drink to the purchaser, but this fraction may be enough to make the retailer say he can't afford to sell two Scotch or Irish whisky drinks for a quarter.

MARY GARDEN IN FAUST NEXT WEEK

Mary Garden will make her first appearance at the Boston Opera House Friday of next week as Marguerite, in "Faust." Miss Garden was announced in the part for the second week of Mr. Hammerstein's engagement at the Boston Theatre last Spring, which was cancelled. Appearing with Miss Garden will be Carl Albert Dumory of the Chicago Company as Faust; Adam Didur of the Metropolitan Company as Mephistopheles; George Baklanoff as Valentine and Swarta as Siebel.

FIGHTS OFF WOMAN AMBULANCE DOCTOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Dr. Elizabeth Brayn, the new Williamsburg hospital ambulance surgeon, had more thrilling experience of her career today, when she answered a call to attend a man who was said to have been stabbed in a free-for-all fight in a saloon at South Second street and Kent avenue. Instead of finding the victim Frank Kolkay jumped up and fought her off with a maniacal fury. He was overcome after a struggle.

READINGS FOR CHILDREN.

Mrs. Marion Craig Wentworth will give her annual course of reading at Steinert Hall on Thursday afternoons at 3 o'clock, beginning February 2, when she will read Masefield's miracle play, "The Blind Man." This reading will be in the nature of children's matinee, as Mrs. Wentworth will offer to children under years of age, as well as to "grown-ups."

CHAMBER MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

At the annual meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce this afternoon, the Board of Directors made a report which covered events of 1910 and told the main things that were within a year by the largest organization of its kind in the country. The Chamber had 4501 members on Jan. 1 last, a gain of about 1,000 in a year. In speaking of freight cases which cover transportation cost from New England to every state in the Union, the report says:

"The proposed general advance in freight rates now before the Interstate Commerce commission for consideration falls largely on eastern shippers, because it covers highclass goods of comparatively important freight charges and to cotton goods to affected territory would be $75,000 per month in freight bills on lumber, sugar, poultry and meat products to Boston alone is reckoned to be between $500,000 and $800,000.

"Decision of the Commerce Commission relative to rates to Spokane and intermediate territory assumes a more equitable establishing rates upon a mileage basis, which would have a disastrous effect upon New England because of its geographical location, and the chamber has filed a protest against which will be heard later."

The Chamber, through expert engineers, has also without charge, is working out an comprehensive plan for developing the water front along East Boston flats. The Legislature has authorized the expenditure of $2,000,000 for the improvement. Boston Harbor will probably have its new 35-foot channel open to the sea by December 31, as about 87 per cent of the work is done. The industrial district within a radius of 20 miles of the State House is increasing in industry faster than similar districts in any other of the thirteen largest cities of the country, except New York.

CHANGES IN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BOARD

A number of changes take place in the directorate of the Chamber of Commerce at the annual election today. Several directors who were active in organizing the new chamber retire. They are: President Bernard J. Rothwell, former President Charles F. Read, General William A. Bancroft, Elmer J. Bliss, James Richard Carter, Edward A. Filene, Frederick P. Fish, George F. Mead, Frank A. Noyes, Elwyn G. Preston and John C. F. Slayton. The nominating committee has recommended the election of William Endicott, Jr., George G. Bennett, William M. Butler, Charles M. Cox, Albert Green Duncan, Percy T. Hagan, Robert Lacy, Walter M. Lowney, James J. Phelan, Frank R. Shepherd and Frederick W. Stone.

Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If the druggist does not have it in stock he will get it quickly from his wholesale house.

This formula is known for hundreds of years for its curative effects on the mucous membrane, but many extracts contain resins that cause nausea and rash. For safety get only that mentioned above.

ANGRY WOMAN SEEKS JANITOR

In the personal horoscope of John H Riley, Janitor of the Watertown Hall, there should be a line reading, "To-day beware of a strong, angry woman. Avoid crossing her path if possible." Mrs. Rosin Shagrue, official scrub woman at the Town Hall, is the woman in the case. She may look Mr. Riley up to-day and ask him to explain why he locked her in the office of the big-way department last night while she was engaged in her daily task of cleaning up the room.

As it happened Mrs. Shagrue had left her keys in the office of the superintendent of streets before going to the highway department office. She was so absorbed in her work that she failed to hear Janitor Riley as he went along the hall locking up the offices for the night. The janitor, likewise was so engrossed in his task that he didn't happen to notice Mrs. Shagrue at work. All the doors, then, were locked. It was three hours and more before Mrs. Shagrue was released. Then Clerk McGrath, who heard her shouts for help as he passed through the hall about 7 o'clock, Mrs. Shagrue intimated her intention of making it her business to see Janitor Riley and telling him what she thought of him.

Mrs. Hibbard now resides at No. 98 Hunter street, Dorchester. In the second suite, being moved there shortly after Mrs. Hibbard's death. The fire started in the apartment below her, occupied by Albert Brown. Its cause is attributed to a defective gas burner.

"BALKAN PRINCESS" MUSIC HIT AT SHUBERT'S

Louise Gunning Captures Hearers with Catchy Songs in Clever Operetta.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

All the top notes in opera are not out on Huntington avenue, in the building just grounds. Miss Louise Gunning unwound a few exceedingly lofty trills at the Shubert Theatre last night, and she was merely exercising with an operatic score at that. But it was made emphatically clear that tones in light opera may sail as high as anything belonging to its more dignified and classical sister in the world of music.

Miss Gunning took the "Balkan Princess" by the arm and led it straight into a smashing musical success, with a song hungry first night audience feeding itself gleefully on melodious waltz songs and ballads that seemed too good to be true. It was a treat to the ear that rivaled the splendid things we heard in "The Spring Maid."

A Real Merry Waltz.

And your old friend the waltz was present in complete regalia, with all the strings and brasses in the big orchestra working themselves into a frenzy as Miss Gunning and Robert Warwick danced through Bohemia in the old familiar way. "Don't Lets Meet Again" was a melody that you couldn't keep out of your feet. It was a tune big enough, soothing enough and tantalizing enough to lift any operetta out of the common place into distinction.

In "The Balkan Princess" the Shubert's have picked something that will put the joy of living into any audience that has a taste for delicious music. Its real charm was exposed in its coaxing melodies, which sent you into Tremont street too late for the suburban trains, but with an irresistible desire to whistle. Those who couldn't whistle hummed.

Comedy on Hand.

There was a spirit of comedy in "The Balkan Princess," too, that was not entirely crushed by its exceptional music. To be sure, there was not of that frantic effort to extract laughs that has spoiled many pieces of similar character, but there was a sane, logical run of merriment in the story that seemed entirely at home in the Balkans.

The humor of stage waiters you have met has been so frequently sad and unimpressive that the real fun you found in Herbert Corthell's performance turned your early doubts into a positive concession that there are two kinds of waiters. Operatic tenors, too, haven't done much to excite admiration recently, but Robert Warwick discarded strutting heroics and gave himself to the task of acting like the right man on the job—which also had its advantages.

Proud Queen of Cape.

As the foreman—her pardon, forelady—of the scrubbing department of the Balkan Palace, May Boley did her best to make things agreeable. Her labors were rather more successful than otherwise. Joseph Herbert and Teddy Webb added something to the gaiety of the evening, and Marie Rose, a freshly made ingenue, had a particularly engaging style of appearing in public. Miss Rose took excellent care of the two songs that fell to her lot.

Upon Miss Vida Whitmore's delicate shoulders was placed the responsibility of making the Bohemian restaurant scene attractively wicked. It was apparently no burden at all, for she was the cafe queen who knew all the tricks of the trade.

"The Balkan Princess" was not only a most inviting operetta, but Miss Gunning made the Princess Stephanie a lady worth knowing.

Boston Theatre.

"The Maestro's Masterpiece," a drama by Edward Locke about grand opera life, began an engagement at the Boston Theatre last night. As the play is acted by live grand opera singers, who burst into song at the slightest provocation, there is a large orchestra to accompany them.

Arthur Hammerstein, son of Oscar, is manager, or impresario, or whatever the proprietor of this piece should be called. It is understood that he is responsible for the libel of "The Maestro's Masterpiece."

Hammerstein took eight or ten of the most famous operatic excerpts like the bacarole from "Tales of Hoffman" and sextet from "Lucia," and said to Edward Locke, who is the author of "The Climax," "Kindly cover these with a play." And he did so.

Hammerstein has secured a sextet of really excellent singers. Maria Pumpari, Leonid Samoiloff, Frederick Jagel, Andrea Sarto, Count Enzo Bozano and Miss Edith M. Somes are all artists of experience and ability upon the operatic stage.

Samoiloff is a good tenor, better than many to whom we have to listen in the dollar opera. Pumpari has a thin but effective dramatic soprano. Miss Somes is a sweet lyric soprano and Count Enzo Bozano an excellent bass.

With Gaetano Merola, a mustached and fiery gentleman, in charge of the large orchestra, much good music occurred.

Keith's.

Real Wild West with bucking broncos, six-guns, lariats and even sombreros and chaps shot up Keith's Theatre in two performances yesterday. The bucking bronco with Lulu Belle Parr on its back brought storms of applause at both performances. This is Billie Burke's new outfit called "Frontier Days," and is the headline.

Mrs. Gardner Crane's new vehicle, in which she won more popular favor, is "The Little Sunshine." It is a farce full to overflowing with merriment and smiles a lot of vaudeville skits, has six real actors in the cast.

The mahogany man, Will H. Fox, and he was mahogany, from his top-knot down, mahogany features, mahogany clothes, even to his shoes and handkerchief, did a musical monologue that was good.

"The Leading Lady," with Ralph Lyng and Mercedes Lorenz, aided by a cast of eight, is a clever skit cleverly conceived. The work of Miss Lorenz and Mr. Lyng is worthy of note, for it was above that of the usual run of vaudeville performers.

Grand Opera House.

"My Friend From Dixie" gave the patrons of the Grand Opera House something to be remembered last evening, for it proved to be one of the most attractive of musical plays. The company is composed of some of the best known colored entertainers on the stage, and with a big chorus of splendid singers, it was plain that the musical side of the piece was in safe hands. There was an abundance of engaging comedy.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Among the many new features at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday was T. F. Thomas.

Orpheum.

Deane and Sibley were the laughing hit at the Orpheum yesterday. Yamomoto Brothers, in their sensational aerial act were exceptionally good, and others on the bill were Robert Mello, Leone Gurney, Earle and Wilson, von Hoff and the Christys.

Columbia Theatre.

The "Miss New York, Jr." company, which has been hailed as one of the biggest laughing shows on the road, began a week's fun at the Columbia Theatre yesterday.

Hub Theatre.

Kittie Bingham and Fred Pisano headed the new programme at the Hub Theatre yesterday.

Waldron's Casino.

Clark's "Runaway Girls," which opened the new week at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday had all of the elements that make up an attractive burlesque entertainment.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Ben Tons" began a lively week at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, with a score of promising young women to help the performance to a successful finish.

Scenic Temple.

The new program at the Scenic Temple yesterday was one of those mixed bills of vaudeville and pictures that had an appeal for everybody. It was up to the usual standard.

Austin & Stone's.

The big card at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday was "The Lady and the Desperado," an act that made an immediate hit with the audiences.

Howard Athenaeum.

It was a dazzling girl show that entertained the patrons at the Old Howard yesterday. "The Kentucky Belles" always holds first place among the beauty shows of burlesque and with the array of stunning young women that appeared yesterday its popularity was not hard to understand.

Plays That Remain.

"Madame X" continues its prosperous career at the Majestic Theatre, where you can guess on the total attendance of the week and win a prize.

John Craig and his players began the final week of "Jack and the Beanstalk" at The Castle Square Theatre yesterday. "The Dollar Princess" began the second week of its engagement at the Colonial Theatre last evening.

The demand for "Follies of 1910" continues at the Tremont Theatre, where a new week was begun last evening.

The final week of "Arsene Lupin" at the Park Theatre was begun last evening. "The Rosary" remains at the Globe Theatre, and two crowded houses gave it close attention yesterday.

Only this week's performances remain of "The Return of Peter Grimm" at the Hollis Street Theatre.

The first bale of cotton ginned in the United States this year was grown at Mercedes, on a Gulf Coast farm.

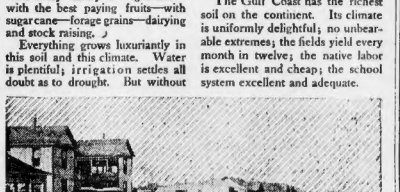
No other section of the country raises such early crops, and secures the highest market prices. But Gulf Coast cotton has more than this advantage. Its quality is identical with that of the famed Sea Island variety of which there is never a sufficient supply. It has a fine, silky, long staple fibre that is always in demand, and each year brings a higher premium.

The cotton planter has more advantages in the Gulf Coast country than in the better known and older cotton regions. His crop fruits earlier and in record time. The perpetual open season enables him to make a profitable showing with his second picking—even if disaster overtakes his first crop.

Not only is the Gulf Coast making men rich with its cotton fields, but with every variety of vegetables—with the best paying fruits—with sugar cane—forage grains—dairying and stock raising.

Everything grows luxuriantly in this soil and this climate. Water is plentiful; irrigation settles all doubt as to drought. But without irrigation the rainfall is sufficient in many districts to insure success.

The Gulf Coast has the richest soil on the continent. Its climate is uniformly delightful; no unbearable extremes; the fields yield every month in twelve; the native labor is excellent and cheap; the school system excellent and adequate.



Gulf Coast towns are up-to-date and able to supply every reasonable luxury.

Good hotels are everywhere. The Gulf of Mexico is accessible within a few hours journey from any point. Fresh fish and oysters are on daily sale in the shops.

More successful people have invested their money in this land than in any similar sized area on the continent. Prosperity is in evidence wherever you turn. Many of the men who have attained the best results were city clerks, merchants and mechanics who knew just as little about farming as you do, and who had no more money to invest than you have saved.

Cheap farms can still be had; you still have a chance to do as well as the rest.

It won't cost you much to visit this country and judge for yourself. Every first and third Tuesday of each month you can purchase a round-trip Landseekers ticket to any point in the Gulf Coast country, from Chicago at $30.00, and from St. Louis or Kansas City at $25.00.

Through standard and tourist sleeping cars are operated by the Frisco Lines from either of these points.

Reaching the Market

Adaptation is a business law just as truly as it is a law of evolution.

The man who can make staple goods and market them in a novel way is just like a man who finds an untouched market free of competitors. He can get the cream of the trade and if there are others, they have to be content to follow.

If your competitor is not advertising and you advertise, you are reaching a market that he does not reach. If your competitor advertises and you are not advertising, your competitor has an advantage that you are not overcoming.

You can educate consumers to the purchasing of new goods, interest them in old goods, by advertising better than in any other way.

A merchant in the Middle West had a splendid national business and thought he had all of the trade in his own town. A friend met him on the street one day and said:

"John, why don't you advertise?"

"Oh, every one knows me and what I sell," said John, "I don't have to advertise in my town."

"You can't sometimes tell," was the reply, "how far the town knows your goods."

And John was induced to advertise. Soon after his advertisements appeared in the local papers, a neighbor who had known him for years stopped him on the street.

"I didn't know you sold that line of goods," said he, "I have been getting them elsewhere."

And John soon found that his goods weren't as well known as he thought and that the best form of advertising was judicious advertising.

If you have goods that your neighbor can buy, advertise to sell them. Don't think because you put a sign on your store and people go by the door that they know all about your goods. You will make the mistake that John did and lose many a sale.

Go into your neighbors' homes, go into strangers' homes, go into the nooks and corners here and there, go to the buying public through such a local newspaper as the Boston American. It can educate the public to the desirability of your goods and put more money into your pocket than any other form of advertising. Just consider that it has almost 400,000 circulation daily, which means that it reaches more homes and more buyers than any other Boston paper.

HORSEMEN PLAN NEW CLUBHOUSE

The Dorchester Gentlemen's Driving Club may build a magnificent clubhouse for its own exclusive use.

At a meeting of the club the matter of a new house was discussed, and the directors were empowered to investigate the matter of the purchase of land and the erection of a clubhouse. They will report on the project at an early meeting.

A proposal was before the meeting that the club should join with the Harvard Improvement Association, the Bowling Club and the Boston City Club, in joining a holding company, to take over the Hendrie property, No. 26 Talbot avenue, diagonally across the street from the Franklin Field Speedway.

The committee of club directors, consisting of President Johnson, Frank W. Hamlin, B. G. Crosby, George H. Greenwood, Albert Fellows, W. J. Fitzgerald, P. O'Hearn, A. T. Wheelock, H. Buckner, William Brummett, Thomas Phillips, H. H. Young, W. J. Griffin, J. W. McEnany and J. H. Buckley, who had considered the merit of the proposition, reported that, in their judgment, the club, as an organization, should give the matter an indefinite postponement. The report of the committee was ratified.

It was the overwhelming sentiment of the members of the club should own an exclusive home of its own, and accordingly the directors were instructed to look into and prepare a report on the plan.

CAMBRIDGE CLUB TO HOLD A BIG SMOKER

Prominent sporting men of Greater Boston will be guests at an entertainment and smoker to be given by the Cambridge Outing and Social Club in Hovey Hall, Cambridge, February 26. The following members have been appointed by President Robert H. Ambrose as a committee of arrangements: Vice-President Edward J. Maloney, Joseph F. Noonan, Joseph A. Sullivan, William H. Ambrose as a committee of arrangements. Vice-President Edward J. Maloney, Joseph F. Noonan, Joseph A. Sullivan, William H. Mullin, Bailey Lynch, John Crowley, John Husbands, Frank Sullivan, Eugene Sullivan, John Keating, William Callahan, William Hogan.

M'DONALD REFUSES TO SELL DEMAREST

Frank L. Burke of Ipswich, a prominent member of the Lynn Driving Club, dropped in upon A. J. Furbush at Brighton, and enjoyed a drive behind W. J. McDonald's crack trotter Dampest, 2:06¼, and as a result of his ride behind the son of Arion and Highwood, 2:08¾, made an offer for the horse. McDonald declined the same. Then Frank made an offer for McDonald's four-year-old pacing mare Ethel Direct, and there was nothing doing in that direction either.

SPORTS of all SORTS

THE PROTEST OF THE BASEBALL fans continues to arise long and loud around the hanging phyrles of the crack major league teams. Pittsburg is reported as ordering sixteen pitchers to the training grounds, and the New York Giants will send fourteen sidekicks through a course in sprouts in Texas. And still the local Rustlers and the St. Louis Cardinals have not one first-class box artist, and the top notch teams are willing to pay needless players to sit upon the bench. Talk kind of a deal is all wrong, unfair to the young players, and mighty discouraging to the youngsters coming into the game with wads of the museum, only to find themselves backed against a Chinese wall.

NAT GOODWIN, WHO IS GETTING the greatest free write-up of any man since Dan Cooke, is a great lover of boxing, and in the old days spent much of his time in the old home in Boston, his favorite rendezvous being the Reynolds House. Nat is something of a mitt artist himself, and a few years ago when over in London at the Cecil, and as mellow as a Bolo-brown pear, managed to get into an international argument, and matters soon became very serious. He was rescued just by one of the best amateur boxers in London, and after the bout was signed the mitt-drill, knocked out the Brummagem in four rounds.

THE RUSH ON THE PART OF BOston followers of the game to get a wager down upon Aldrian in the third round at Jacksonville, was indeed a corker. A good sized jackpot of Boston money went to the intermediate on Baron Comly, Tac defeated the favorite. All of which bears out the previous statement in this column that the track conditions at Memorial Park are the most uncertain in the world. Aldrian should have won by a romp. It is quite a long day in town, however, since the local talent felt so certain of a winner as they did of Aldrian. The parlay bettors were also hard hit by the defeat of the favorite.

IT IS NOW SAID THAT A SWELL society horse show will surely go through this Spring. It requires $15,000 of the needful to come across with the cracks, riding and driving stoppers, but it is said Boston guarantors of this amount will be forthcoming, and a mixed equine exhibition given in Mechanics hall.

THE FEAT OF ALDEN A. MILLS, OF the Paddock building, in killing a 1,000 pound man-eating shark while angling for tarpon down in the Florida keys, is the exploits of Boston fishermen in recent years. With a rod and reel and in an open launch to load a gaff hook in the shark's gullet with fatal blows, and then take on another finned monster of almost the same size, and again deal a death stab with the gaff, is going a few, to say the least.

THE BOSTON HORSEMEN WHO ARE enjoying the ice races at Montreal, are having quite a time of their lives. The American horses can deliver the goods at the races and you are able to cash nicely at the little window, and there are all manner of diversions. The famous drive up Mount Royal, always a great attraction in Summer, makes a magnificent snow-path for pleasure driving in Winter, and the ride from Montreal across the frozen, glistening surface, is one to be described in words.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING CONtests of the Spring training trips, will be the effort of Jiggs Donohue, the veteran first baseer, and a Kansas recruit named Jones, to decide which one has a call manner of diversions. The famous drive up Mount Royal, always a great attraction in Summer, makes a magnificent snow-path for pleasure driving in Winter, and the ride from Montreal across the frozen, glistening surface, is one to be described in words.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING CONtests of the Spring training trips, will be the effort of Jiggs Donohue, the veteran first baseer, and a Kansas recruit named Jones, to decide which one has a large grain of salt. Anyone who has ever passed a Summer in St. Louis and encountered the heat of the Jefferson proof, will smile at this report. Who should be sulker over the shut off in the Mound City? In summer time would be little less than a riot upon the part of the frenzied fans.

IT IS QUEER HOW THE PLAYING of baseball has been passed up here in town. Ten years ago, the good old Irish game was the favorite means of light training by baseball players, who did not care to take on too much flesh in Winter, and many of the boxers also found the game very serviceable in training. But handball has been generally passed up around town these days.

BOSTON GOLF MEN IN MEET

PALM BEACH, Fla., January 24.—The first golf tourney of the season started this morning with an eighteen-hole qualification round for the New Year's cup offered by the Royal Poinciana Hotel.

In the play for the annual trophy last year, it was captured by Louis P. Myers, who will be well remembered in Boston as the young college player who first won what was then the Massachusetts amateur championship played at Wollaston for a cup offered by C. B. Cory in the early days of golf in the Bay State.

This year he will not be a contender, but Dr. S. W. Blanchard of Commonwealth and his clubmate, S. P. Freer, B. H. Dickson and L. D. Ahl of the famous Country Club, Brookline; L. E. Martin, who calls Boston his home, and H. F. Farrington of Woodland, are some of the Boston entrants who have been seen on the links in practice rounds and who will try to hold the Bay State's end up.

Among the best known players entered from the Western Metropolitan and Philadelphia districts are: H. K. Bolton of Owensia, Chicago; former Canadian champion Charles S. Brand of Montreal; Jakalela, Mississippi, and J. Alison Baron of Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, who is the present Ohio State champion. Commodore Frank Porter Ward of Buffalo from the Niagara Falls Country Club; Cyril Tolley, half-brother of Harry K. Thaw, from the Aldershot Club, England; H. Chandler Egan, Chicago, Ill., Charles Evans, jr., H. M. Forrest of Lakewood, one of the Delaware peach growers, managed to get into a Harry B. Smith baseball meeting, and Clifford Hodge of the Atlantic City Country Club. The drives are to be recorded in the qualification scores and in addition to the winners and runners-up prizes on each division there will be a low score medal for the player who leads the field on the first day.

SHAKE UP SCHEDULE OF PENNSY'S ELEVEN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 24.—At the meeting of Pennsylvania's football committee to-day, several changes are announced in the 1911 plans. As the Red and Blue has decided to break off a game with any of the "Big Four" next Fall, Penn is now without a game with Syracuse and University of Pittsburg being played.

In order not to conflict with the Princeton-Harvard game at Princeton on November 11, it is announced that the Penn and Blue will have the Indians forward on the schedule about a week.

The Brown game will likely be played here again, and it is hinted that West Virginia is to be dropped from the list.

KAUFMANN NOW ON JEFF'S TRAIL

By TAD.

Billy Delaney had bobbed up again in sporting circles, and said the other day in Frisco that if Jim Jeffries had any idea of returning to the ring, Al Kaufman was willing to box him for $10,000 a side.

"I understand," said Delaney, "that Tex Rickard is trying to match Jeffries and Johnson again, and that Jeff is seriously thinking of the affair. Now, the public does not take the thing as seriously as Jeffries does, and if he will defeat Kaufman there's a chance that the Johnson go might attract some attention.

"Billy Brady offered to bet $10,000 two years ago that Kaufman could beat Jeffries, but we never even got a rise out of Jeffries & Co., the backers of the white hope.

"I have backing right here in Frisco for the same amount, and will let Jeffries cut the money any way he likes."

Frisco papers are inclined to think that a Kaufman-Jeffries bout would help stimulate the game some and at least give us a line on the ability of both men as an opponent for the present champion.

Should Jeffries go into training now and refrain from drinking tea and knock Kaufman out the public certainly would give a return match between Johnson and himself, but until he is tried out by another good heavy the Reno affair will stick hard.

JOE COSTER FINDS BEECHER HARD GAME

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Joe Coster beat Willie Beecher by a semi-margin in their ten-round bout at the Vanderbilt A. C. The conqueror of Abe Attell found the boy from the East stiff a tough proposition, but toward the close of the session Joe was the one to do damage, mauling and clawing Willie about the ring, and clean, hard blows gave him the decision.

WILL HEAD BATTING ORDER OF YANKEES

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Eugene Elliott, a third baseman who was released from the McKeesport Club of the Ohio-Pennsylvania League last Fall by President Farrell, has signed his contract for the season of 1911 with the New York Americans. It is Manager Chase's plan to have Elliott lead off for the local club next season. Elliott made these records last year: Batting, .296; fielding, .952.

BOSTON MEN IN POLO TOURNEY

"The arrangements for the International polo championship between Meadowbrook, the American holders of the cup, and Hurlingham, the English challengers, will be definitely decided in New York Friday," said Joshua Crane, jr., the crack Dedham player, at his offices in Congress street, this morning.

"The American players preferred to have the international polo matches in June, but to this plan the Hurlingham team demurred, on account of the coronation ceremonies of King George V. The English players declared a preference for the matches being played in August, but as this would conflict with the American championships, the dates proposed were not to the liking of the American players."

As to the proposed All-America polo tournament, at the field of George J. Gould, at Lakewood Court, New Jersey, and in which H. L. Agassiz of this city, and Myopia crack, and Mr. Crane played last year, the latter felt the reports were rather premature.

"There will be no polo at Lakewood until the latter part of March, and in view of the coming international matches, I doubt very much if Mr. Gould gives such a tournament this year."

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

KID SHEA DEFEATS FRANK PERRON AT HYDE PARK BOUTS

It Doesn't Look as Though They Could Stall Off the Rent Much Longer — By "Bud" Fisher

DR. ROLLER WOULD ABOLISH TOE HOLD

By DR. BEN F. ROLLER,

Written for the Boston American by the Noted Wrestler.

While any manly sport must of necessity be rugged, still there is always a point where the question of sportsmanship is passed and then comes the desire to win under any circumstances.

Under ordinary conditions this spirit of desire to win is commendable, but when it involves even temporary injury to an opponent it is to be deplored.

Rule makers in football have struggled with this problem for years; rule after rule amended, and prohibitions on certain plays enacted, all tending to reduce the liability to accident.

This can be done by committees having power, as in baseball, football, basketball and other sports, but in wrestling there is no such organization and it is up to the wrestlers themselves, aided by the promoters and by public opinion to eliminate certain tricks and holds which are disabling.

The A. A. U. rules make broad provision for this by giving the referee power to rule any hold as disabling. His power is arbitrary, as it should be, but of course such a ruling is practically impossible in professional sport.

Would Bar Toe Hold.

Public opinion and the wrestlers and promoters have the matter in their hands, and if they take up the question of the toe hold it will, I think follow the strangle hold into the oblivion it deserves.

The toe hold, although as old as catch-as-catch-can wrestling, has only been 'played up' as a feature hold in the past three years, simply because it enabled Frank Gotch, who developed it to his highest efficiency, to work his way to the championship of the world.

I think, however, that Gotch would have eventually become champion of the world without this terrible hold, this adding force to my argument that the toe hold produces little except punishment.

I have used the hold myself a number of times but only when my chances of winning looked desperate. A case in point was in my match with Hackenschmidt, here in Boston Christmas night, when I applied the hold on the Russian hard.

It punished him severely, but it gained me nothing in the way of a fall. I have never yet wrestled in a match where the hold was specifically barred, but I am in favor of having it so, if my opponent chooses.

Hold is Dangerous.

If the hold is permitted under the agreement then of course it is up to a man to take advantage of it, but I can never reconcile myself to the belief that the hold is not dangerous and unsportsmanlike.

Suppose, for instance, that in a minor match some novice should get the hold on a champion and having hand strength enough, breaks a bone in the ankle. Would you make the novice a champion in name for the time-being, and would make the sport ridiculous. That is another angle of the question that is worth considering.

I am not in favor of making wrestling a gentle sport, by any means. I want to see it just as rugged as it can be made, but want it to be, above all things, sportsmanlike, with a premium on skill instead of placing a champion in a position where he is at the mercy of a novice because of a hold that is neither an indention of skill or that the user possesses sportsmanship in the truest sense of that term.

No Hold Barred for Big Match.

As many of the best wrestlers of today work in their bare feet in Oriental style because of the greater security on the bare feet on the canvas, this matter is bound to be brought up soon.

It is not barred in my match next Saturday night with Zbyszko in Mechanics' Building, but this is because nothing was mentioned in the articles of agreement. I am personally in favor of making the start to stop the use of this hold, although it will be to my advantage to have it retained.

Ered is a matter for ½ bysko to decide, however."

BOWLING ALLEY NEWS

There was nothing doing last night toward making the two-man match between Christopher-Gallagher and Merkel-Poehler. It was reported by those present at the American office in the intervals of the main match that posters going to make room for the return of Foehler from Berlin, N. H., tonight. Should Foehler be late with the announcement of the match, every man should be in the pink of condition and all present Poehler has to do is to step right into the game. In this way it is possible the match will be pulled off next week. Either pair can be accommodated at any of Morris' alleys.

The General Electric Soccer Football team of Lynn will be the first to play football in this section around Boston in a series of three games, one in Boston, one in Lynn, and one on a neutral alley if necessary. The teams must be bona-fide members of the football club. Address Williams, care of Nelson's alleys, West Lynn.

Shoaib's Boston Stars are out with a challenge to play the Suffolk team of Holyoke, holders of the world's team record, for the championship of New England. They will play one game, Boston, and one return match in Holyoke alleys. The makeup of the Boston Stars is House, Hoffman, Christopher, Gallagher and Shoaib.

Walter Kirk reports new teams entering his tournament with the following affairs: Blinds are to be scrapped. The prizes offered, too, are well worth competing for and to Manger's alleys next month.

Hintze's Specials will wager from $50 to $100 that they can beat Foehler's Pets in a match game, and would like to have the same decided within two weeks. Hintze's Specials comprise House, Hintz, Christopher, Dabney and Beaty.

Charles Symonds did not put in an appearance at the conference to enter Chic and Curtis in a three-cornered ten-man match with Christopher-Gallagher and Merkel-Poehler. It case been a wasted opportunity.

What happened to the Harvard Specials at Gloucester the other night is a shame to talk about. The fellow folks handed a bad beating in hearty style.

The two-armed team of Stewart & Howe sprung a big surprise and won three pouts from Christopher-Gallagher the same night. Both pitchers a rub from now on.

What happened to the Harvard Specials at Gloucester the other night is a shame to talk about. The fellow folks handed a bad beating in hearty style.

O. W. Holmes of the Leather League rolled 126, 101, 118 for a 345 total at the Boston alleys.

Brady in the third string brought up 16, 16, 16, 19 and 16 spares, bowling a great game.

Sell vs. Peltier showed Bigelow & Kennard how to win four points.

BIG WAGERS ON MONTREAL RACE

One of the greatest races of the Winter season should be seen upon the ice at Montreal today, when Fred Nuthurst, 2:12¾, and St. Anthony, 2:11¾, meet. A raft of New England money will be wagered upon the son of Nuthurst, to help bring home the bacon, and it looks as if he would succeed. The 2:24-trot should prove a very open race, with a good field taking the word.

Entries and selections are as follows:

2:12 Pace—Bert Nuthurst, St. Anthony, Alcyde, Little Sandy, Nancy, Graveland Winsome, Jessie Price, Gold Hill, Lady Foot Prince, Joe Swing, Lou R., Rex, Frieda K., Edna D. Bert Nuthurst should be returned a handsome winner.

2:24 Trot—Lady Brant, Mabel Isabel, Lady I., American Boy, Margaret Leonard, Young Flay, Emily Morris, Silver King, Sir Jain, Last Edition, George Kaplan, Rainberry, Karnes, Ned Wilkes. It should be a great race between Margaret Leonard and Emily Morris, the stark Toronto mares, with the chances favoring the former.

Boling Clay, who is named as a starter, will be well remembered here in Boston, as the favorite multiee horse of Peter B. Bradley, in the best days of the Boston Nonpareil Driving Club at Readville.

ALBENESE LOSES TO EAST BOSTON BOXER

Joe Muncks of East Boston defeated Nick Albenese in the 115-pound special match in the amateur boxing tourney at the Commonwealth A. C., Cambridge. Ed. Flynn, the Lynn lightweight, won the 135-pound class. Harry Cosmero, who was to have met Gilbert Gallant in a special bout, retired at the last minute. In the open 125-pound class Eli Valley won, defeating Pat Hood of East Boston in the final three-round match. Joe Collins of Boston won the 105-pound class from Dan Mahoney, after a first three-round bout. The open class in the 115-pound division was won by James Flewelin, who defeated Jim McCloskey in three rounds.

COAST STAR SIGNS UP WITH RED SOX

The Red Sox have received the signed contract of C. D. Thomas, who was drafted from the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League last Fall. Thomas, whose home is in Sharon, Pa., is the nineteenth Red Sox to sign up and his action gives Manager Donovan a fairly good playing squad with which to start the "coast to coast" trip.

SHEAN-SCHAFER TRADE IS OFF

By BID WHIPPLE.

The "executive committee" of the Boston National Baseball Club has quashed all proceedings in the Shean-Schafer deal that was to have taken place between Boston and New York.

Here are some of the inside facts. In a nutshell, it might be said that President Russell wanted to make the trade. Vice-President Page did not. As these two men are the executive committee there was a deadlock. The board of directors, consisting of Russell, Murphy, and the two pages, was of course also deadlocked. Consequently they could take no action in the matter, and the deal will not go through.

Last week the owners of the Hustlers journeyed to New York and talked over trades with Harney Dreyfuss and John McGraw. Every deal that was suggested fell through. Finally Page came back to Boston.

Russell remained to talk over matters again with McGraw. He offered Shean in an even swap for Fletcher. McGraw refused. Russell then offered Shean for Fletcher and Schafer. McGraw accepted the offer.

Why the Deal Fell Through.

President Russell then bethought himself of the by-law which requires the approval of the executive committee to any such trade. Before completing the deal he thought it wise to find out what Page thought. Meanwhile, he and Manager Fred Mitchell drew up a contract binding the two men, with the stipulation that before the final papers were signed the approval of the executive committee would be first obtained.

McGraw immediately let the news of the deal out of the bag, and told the newspapers that the swap was already consummated. Mr. Page had not yet given his consent and was accordingly displeased with this turn of affairs.

The outcome of it all was that the official meeting of the executive committee, yesterday, was merely a conference to talk the matter by the announcement that the deal was off.

Contrary to reports, there is still harmony in the Hustler camp. There is not necessarily no matters of difference between the owners, but both sides claim that these can always be adjusted easily and without any trouble.

Following is the official statement given out by the owners after the skirmish:

"The executive committee of the baseball club of the New York Club of Players Shean and Schafer has been adversely disposed of by the executive committee. The president favored it, but the majority of the board of directors before the executive committee. Secretary Lothrop confirms Mr. C. Page's previous statement that this proposed trade would not be approved by the executive committee."

All of which is a very neat and concise statement that tells the whole story.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Manager Tenney of the Bees club has turned over a number of his pitching aspirants to Manager Wilson of the Hartford Club. Wilson likes in Hartford and was eager to play there.

Four more players have been released or shipped to Indianapolis. The former Club player Hamilton and Catcher Charles Marsh have been sent to the Hoosier city. Hamilton says that the Cubs groundskeeper had his chickens in the outfield and that he had to shoo them off every inning. Fielding players to see the place in Indiana.

Hartford says that he will have brought to the February meeting of the league section of Rules by which demands that every manager give the visiting players proper and suitable dressing rooms, hot and cold shower baths. The fine for failure to provide those is $25 a day. If the rule is enforced, says the Bees' chief, "Murphy owes the league $1,000,000."

Manager Hugh Jennings is spending his honeymoon touring the South. The Tiger leader recently witnesses a fight in Mexico. Hughey pronounced the sport great, but not as exciting as baseball. He says that baseball is the best game in all of the countries he has visited, and that Americans make the greatest ball players in the world."

Bill Phillips, the veteran pitcher, has been offered a job to act as scout for the St. Louis Americans. The Cleveland club has also made him an offer to corral minors stars from the minors.

It has been announced in the West that Pat Wright, last year in the Wisconsin-Illinois League, has accepted terms with President Ed Barrow of the Eastern League. Barrow refuses to divulge the fact, but will announce it at the schedule meeting in Baltimore, Md., February 3 next.

Hugh Jennings has sold Pitcher David Skeels to Spokane. Skeels is an Indian who was purchased by the Tigers from Regina of the Northwestern League. With a baseball club he was two and half fourteen games. He has been batted back to Oregon.

SHEA DEFEATS FRANK PERRON

Kid Shea of South Boston, who has been showing some speed in the welter-weight class, has the scalp of Frank Perron of Pawtucket dangling from his belt today. The local boxer defeated Perron in a fast ten-round bout, which was the feature event of the formal opening of the newly organized Hyde Park A. A. Shea won by a clear margin.

From the start Shea used a left jab that got Perron's goat. The Pawtucket boy tried to put the right one over, but Shea got out of the way with almost as much ease as a dollar gets out of a man's pocket. It looked all off with Perron in the fifth round, when Shea put over a left that dropped Frank for the count of eight, but the game Pawtucket boxer rallied and managed to stay the limit.

Had Referee Tony Power Perron did not come as a great surprise, as the South Boston boy has not been showing much of late. The big surprise, however, came when Reese Hughes, who has his home in South Boston, dethroned Jerry Meehill of Roxbury for the title in the ninth round. Referee Power's victory marked his return to the ring.

In the other preliminaries Joe Miley of Roxbury got the decision over Butch Carr of South Boston. Referee Martin Clingerty also gave the decision to Billy Sears of Chelsea, who hooked up with Tony Lorenzo of this city.

It was said that the old track is a fine track. The track has been in use one hundred years, and was the scene of the triumphs of Hambletonian and Stamboul.

The annual race of sailing yachts from the Larchmont Yacht Club to Bermuda will start from Rowe's Wharf on June 3.

Hollis Burgess of this city, the well-known Eastern yachtsman, has just returned home from Bermuda, after completing arrangements for the contest.

Mr. Burgess says the people of Bermuda are enthusiastic over the outlook for this season's contest. This will be the first time since 1908 that the boats have been out on the ocean cruise north of New York. In 1908 the race began at Marblehead.

"The city of Boston," Mr. Burgess said, will make the commencement of the race a gala occasion and probably will offer a number of prizes for contestants. The Mayor of St. George, Bermuda, is using every effort to make this year's race the most successful ever held. For the first time Bermuda will have entries."

Among the entries thus far received are the schooner Vigilant, owned by Harold S. Vanderbilt, which won the race last year; the schooner Sildvara, owned by J. V. Morrell; the schooner Ingomar, owned by Howard Lloyd, and the schooner Margaret, owned by Frank Munn.

SANDY BATTLES BARRY TONIGHT

Sandy Ferguson of Chelsea and Jim Barry of Chicago are to up for the third time at the Armory Club to-night. It should be one hot mill from the start to the finish.

A whole lot of "wise" men are seeing nothing but Mr. Barry. They're banking on Jim to give the "Rhubarb Otter" a bad beating. And just Sandy may fool 'em.

Sandy is not the greatest boxer in the world, not by a joyful. Neither is he over endowed with confidence and cunning. But to-night may be the night in which he may do the unexpected.

Barry, for that matter, is far removed from being a world-beater. He would not, and often, two, three with the local man if Sandy was in the same condition that he was when he met one Young Thum over in Chelsea Tuesday, however, Sandy is a different man from the man he was at that time. He has gone back, instead of bawling advanced skills he may upset the dope, and rap the bacon.

The latter has been scheduled to box twelve rounds, but, judging from the two other contests between them to-night it may not go that distance in their first bout Barry had cut a foul in the tenth round, and in their recent meeting at New Orleans the sponge was thrown into the ring in the fourteenth round in order to save Ferguson from a knockout.

Jack Grimshaw is going to referee the bout. He will have his hands full trying to make the boys live up to the rules laid down by the late Marquis of Queensbury.

The preliminaries will see Jimmy Flanagan of Cambridge and Young Myers of Lynn, Jimmy Ryan and Jimmy Walsh, Pal Moore, too early in his career, but who has a good bid for himself by the big mitt he made rapid improvement. Young Murray vs. Young Keefe, and Jack Murphy vs. Young Sharkey will furnish the attraction in the other two preliminaries.

WALSH AND ATTELL CLASH ON THURSDAY

Jimmy Walsh and Monte Attell will meet in a ten-round bout at the Madison A. C., New York, Thursday night. Teddy Murphy, who has been sparring with Walsh for the past few weeks, will meet Harry Hunt in the semi-final match. Walsh and Attell are to box at 122 pounds at 3 o'clock ringside. Murphy is suffering from an attack of grippe and will not box to-night. Young Skies volunteered to take Murphy's place against Hunt, but Manager Jack Curley of the Murphy boy says that his condition will not permit of Murphy's appearance in the ring.

The bout between Tommy Murphy and Knockout Brown, to be pulled off in Providence to-night, is attracting a lot of attention in New York. Murphy is a favorite with the fans there, but Brown has been showing up well in his recent battles with Paddy Lavin in Providence. Murphy has recently been in Providence, and it is said that he will be in that city a week from to-night.

Al Weigand, the holder of the lightweight championship, agreed to appear at a benefit for the Providence Boys' Club, but Manager Jack Curley of the Milwaukee boy refused to allow his pupil to box in Providence.

MURPHY-BROWN BOUT ON; TOMMY IS ILL

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The much-discussed ten-round battle between Tommy Murphy and "Knockout" Brown, which was scheduled to be held at the Empire A. C. to-morrow night, is off. Murphy is down with a bad case of grippe and will not fight off. He left his training camp at Fishkill, N. Y., and went to his home in Philadelphia, Pa., where he will probably take Murphy's place.

BOXING NEWS AND GOSSIP

There will be no Tanner Murphy-Knockout Brown bout at the Empire Athletic Club of Harlem, New York, to-night. Tanner Murphy has left Murphy in responsible for the calling off of the bout. Murphy is suffering from an attack of grippe and will not be in shape to box for a week. Skies volunteered to take Murphy's place against Brown, but Manager Jack Curley of the Murphy boy says that his condition will not permit of Murphy's appearance in the ring. Jimmy Moriarty of Lowell and Frank [illegible] of Lawrence, who were matched to box ten rounds at the Fall River A. C. on February 2, have changed their bout to the Lowell A. C. game in and around the Mill City.

Moriarty, who is a pupil of Jack O'Keefe, will re-appear and have a swell card for the opening of the new Lowell A. C. quarters. Jimmy Barr, Barr Downey to the main bout. A high class semi-final will be pulled off preliminary.

The Keeping Company Problem

By DOROTHY DIX

ONE of the things that appears to greatly trouble the youths and maidens of this community is the difficulty of establishing just what jurisdiction each has over the other, prior to the time when the young man pops the question and there is a definite understanding.

This halcyon period is popularly known as "keeping company." Theoretically it should be ideal, a time of the fluttering wings and the golden glory of dawning love, of the vague anticipation and nebulous dreams, when every day the potential lovers would discover fresh charms and qualities in each other, and everything would be untouched, unmarred by any odious sense of duty and obligations. For once love would be free, as it never can be when it comes the pathway of the noose of the marriage tie into which, one knows, one must run one's neck at the end of an engagement.

Theory vs. Practice

That is the theory of "keeping company," but the practice seems to work out very differently, and to be filled with heart burnings, and bitter jealousy, and impotent reproaches. There is not a day that I do not get a dozen letters, calling upon me to arbitrate the difficulties that have grown out of this situation, where one is neither fish, nor flesh, nor good red herring—where one is neither engaged nor disengaged, neither bond nor free.

A girl will write that she has been "keeping company" with a young man for two or three or four years, and that he has suddenly quit coming to see her, and began paying ardent attention to some beauteous young creature who waits in the same office as he does. Wherefore the girl feels herself neglected and forsaken, and weeps bitter tears.

Or a young man writes that he has been "keeping company" with a girl for a year and a half, but that when he took her to a ball she danced four times with another man, and that she also permitted this other man to come and see her, although he protested against it. In consequence of which he feels himself a much abused person and berates the girl for being flirty and frivolous.

It Binds Neither

"Keeping company" commits a man to nothing. It binds a girl to nothing, and the most elementary sense of justice should show both parties they have no cause for complaint, no matter what the other one does. You can't break a bargain until you have made one. You can't lose a thing until you have it. You can't regulate the conduct of a man or woman unless that individual has given you a legal right to do so.

It certainly shows nerve on the part of a man to think that he has the privilege of dictating to a girl what other men she shall associate with when he hasn't even asked her to be his wife, and may possibly never ask her. There is no other such exhibition in the world as a girl and one of the swell-headed youth who because he is "keeping company" with a girl arrogates to himself the right to monopolize her society.

Nor has a woman any right to feel ill used when the man who has been "keeping company" with her flutters away. He has never proposed marriage to her. He has never assumed any obligation to her. She hasn't even the slightest hold on his coat tails, and if she has let him drive all other men away, and cut her off from all other masculine society, why, she's got nobody to blame but herself. She's merely got to pay the price of her folly.

From a practical standpoint it is impossible to even imagine why girls should have little enough sense to stand for the "keeping company" custom, for a minute. They have everything to lose by it, and nothing to gain. A girl who permits a man to come and see her two or three times a week, who is always seen out with him, and who shuts her door in other young men's faces, puts herself absolutely in the man's power. If he doesn't choose to take her to places she must stay at home. If he doesn't come to see her, she sits up solitary and alone, and if he finally decides that he doesn't like her, after all, she is left lamenting when he rides away. All of her youth and good looks may have been wasted in years of waiting on him to speak. And he never spoke.

Nor is the "keeping company" idea a good one for men. Many a man who has been charmed by a girl at first finds out after a longer acquaintance with her that he does not like her as well as he thought, but if he knows that he has kept her from marrying somebody else, if he is a conscionable man he feels constrained to offer himself up as a sacrifice to her.

Some Good Advice

It is a good thing for men and women to see and know many women and men before they pick out their life mates. This is impossible in the monstrous conditions imposed by the "keeping company" custom, which limits a man to going to see one girl, and a girl to receiving the attentions of but one man. Incidentally, it has a tendency to make people tired of each other before ever they get married, and, Heaven knows, the thirty or forty years of matrimony give ample time for the average man and woman to be doomed to a restricted diet of each others' society.

My earnest advice to all young men and women who are "keeping company" is to break up the silly and vulgar custom, which, by the way, only obtains in a most unsophisticated circle of society. Don't tie yourself, young sir, to a girl's apron string until you have made up your mind whether you want to be fastened there for life or not, and don't feel that because you condescend to wear out a girl's chairs and run up her gas bill you have any right to manage her. The privilege of bossing a woman goes with paying her bills.

And you, Miss Juliet. Don't narrow yourself down to a single beau until he begins flat hunting. Competition is the life of trade, especially the love trade. For to her who hath many admirers still more shall be added, but from her who hath not shall be taken away even the one poor lone horn steady that she had.

Winter's Joys and Sorrows

Who can be happier than a boy with a new pair of skates? The cold doesn't bother him; he only wishes it would last forever. The Summer is all right in its way, but you can have a whole lot more fun in Winter. But the human derelicts that drift about the city streets can't see Winter in the same light as the rosy-faced youngster on skates. To them it means a constant struggle to keep the blood from freezing in their veins. Summer can't come a day too soon for them.

Bits of Philosophy

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Ask any woman what she considers the most tragic age for death to come, and she will name the age of a child she lost.

No one is satisfied with the manner in which other men's religion affects them.

Sometimes a woman's refusal to complain of her husband to her friends doesn't originate in her loyalty to him, but in her lack of confidence in them.

In the books, the great confidences the women have to confide in are called "sad secrets," but in real life the nearest thing to a sad secret is when one confesses to another that she has found a bedbug.

When a man wants to take home company for dinner he has to ask his wife's permission, and she has to ask the cook's.

One's troubles take up time enough without taking up more time to tell about them.

It is a woman's notion that both ends don't meet unless there is enough left over to supply her kin.

Self-supporting Spins would leave larger estates if they made the discovery sooner that the men are not worth curling one's hair for.

By a merciful provision of nature when a man is too old to be welcome in society he is also too old to care.

Who Is a Christian?

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHO is a Christian in this Christian land
Of many churches and of lofty spires
Not he who sits in soft upholstered pews
Bought by the profits of unholy greed,
And looks devotion, while he thinks of gain.
Not he who sends petitions from the lips
That lie to-morrow in the street and mart.

Not he who fattens on another's toil,
And flings his unearned riches to the poor.
Or aids the heathen with a lessened wage,
And builds cathedrals with an increased rent.
Christ, with Thy great, sweet, simple creed of love,
How must Thou weary of Earth's "Christian" clans
Who preach salvation through Thy saving blood
While planning slaughter of their fellow men.

Who is a Christian? It is one whose life
Is built on love, on kindness and on faith;
Who holds his brother as his other self;
Who toils for justice, equity and peace,
And hides no aim or purpose in his heart
That will not chord with universal good.

Though he be pagan, heretic or Jew,
That man is Christian and beloved of Christ.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

The Maid Leaves

IT was Monday morning and Helen was making a list for the laundry. Sheets, 4; pillow cases, 6; table cloths, 2; napkins, 8; towels—

Here Anna came to the door with a letter in her hand. "Oh, ma'am, what do you think? I just got a letter from"—

"Don't bother me now—I'm counting the clothes! How many towels did I say?" Again she counted the towels and put down six.

"Well, what is it?" impatiently, uncomfortably conscious of Anna still standing in the door.

"Jim's very sick, ma'am—he's in the hospital.'

"Jim?" Helen repeated vaguely, her mind still on the laundry list. "Who's Jim?"

"Why, my brother, ma'am," reproachfully. "Don't you remember—his wife died last Spring?"

"Oh, yes."

"He has three little ones, you know, and there's nobody to look after them and he wants me to go."

"But Anna—you're not going?"

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but I guess I'll have to."

"But what will I do? You can't leave me now."

Anna's Kindly Suggestion

"If you could get Mrs. Fitzgerald," Anna suggested. (Mrs. Fitzgerald was the woman who came to clean windows and woodwork.)

"For how long? How long will you be gone?"

"I can't tell, ma'am. Maybe a week—maybe longer. I'll have to stay until Jim gets out of the hospital."

"Oh, Anna," wailed Helen, "I suppose you must go—but I do wish your brother hadn't selected just this time to get sick! Well," resignedly, "when do you want to start?"

"Jim writes me to come at once. I thought I'd get ready as soon as I got the breakfast things cleared away."

Helen could only consent. If Anna's brother was sick and his children alone of course she would have to go. But it was most inconvenient just now.

Anna straightened up everything and left at noon, just as soon as she could, and to write At once how her brother was and how long she thought he would need her.

To do without Anna for several weeks! Anna, who had been with them since their marriage, and who was so good and faithful. Helen supposed she could get Mrs. Fitzgerald, but the thought of having that loquacious, untidy old lady about was not pleasant. She resolved not to send for her until she talked it over with Warren that evening.

Her Brave Decision

In the meantime, she would get dinner all by herself. She would allow Warren that she was not helpless, even if she was left suddenly without a maid. She would prove to him what a really delightful dinner she could get all alone.

The butcher had already left the roast which Anna had ordered early that morning. But for this dinner Helen wanted something less commonplace than roast beef. So she put in the refrigerator for the next day, and then telephoned for a small, plump chicken.

She would have chicken paprika, with rice and green peppers and curry—the way Warren liked it. And she ordered also asparagus and endive for salad, and a pineapple for pineapple float. It was to be a really wonderful dinner!

She began early in the afternoon to get things ready, to prepare the vegetables and make the salad dressing.

But, first of all, she drew Warren's big chair into the kitchen, filled it with a comfort and pillows and there installed the baby. Winifred, delighted with her new surroundings, cooed and shook her silver rattle and watched her mother with big, wondering eyes.

"You're as good as gold, aren't you, sweetheart?" And Helen, with a knife in one hand and a bottle of asparagus in the other, stooped over to kiss her. And there were many such interruptions during the preparation of that dinner.

After a while, when Winifred grew tired of the rattle, Helen gave her a big wooden spoon, with which she pounded contentedly on the chair until she fell over asleep among the pillows.

A Surprise for Warren

Helen got out one of the best table cloths and the prettiest china and silver and set the table as attractively as she could. Would it be extravagant to telephone for a few flowers for a centerpiece? They would add so much! She hesitated for some time and then called up the florist in the next block and ordered a dozen pink carnations. They were only seventy-five cents. Surely she ought to have them.

And she would burn candles! It would be a real party. Just she and Warren—at this, the first dinner she had really cooked alone since their marriage. So she got out the silver candlesticks with their pretty pink shades. And then she stood back and viewed the table with happy satisfaction.

The Message Over the Telephone

When everything about the dinner was ready, she hurried into her room to dress. Quickly she slipped into one of her dainties gowns. Wouldn't Warren be surprised? She pictured his pleased astonishment when he found she had done this all alone. He might even take her in his arms and say, "Just the most wonderful little woman in the world!" That was what he sometimes did on very rare and beautiful occasions. They had not been frequent of late; but to-night he would—she felt sure he would.

She had just finished dressing when the telephone rang. It was Warren.

"I'm bringing Jack Dawson home for dinner. Tell Anna to do the best she can—am sorry I couldn't let her know sooner."

"But Anna's not here," she gasped, before she had time to think.

"Not there?"

"No—her brother's sick and sent for her."

"Jove, that's too bad! Then I'll have to take Dawson to the club."

"No—no. I've cooked dinner myself—there's plenty for three! And it's all ready—I'll have it on the table by the time you get here."

"Oh, no. Dawson's a mighty stiff, conventional chap. I wouldn't bring him to any pick-up dinner."

"But it isn't a 'pick-up' dinner. I've been all afternoon preparing it! It's really a very——"

"Goodby," He Said, and Hung Up

"Well, it's all right for you to experiment on me—but it wouldn't be fair to draw old Dawson in! He hasn't done anything to deserve it, you know." And he laughed as though that was an excellent joke.

"But Warren, listen!" excitedly. "I have chicken paprika——"

"Here comes Dawson now. I can't say anything more—he'll hear me. Goodby; I'll be home around 10." And before Helen could prevent it he had hung up the receiver.

Even if she wanted to call him up again she couldn't. It was too late. He was in at his office, and she had no idea from where he was phoning.

As though dazed by the sudden disappointment she still stood by the telephone. Through the open dining-room door she caught a glimpse of the table she had so carefully prepared—the dainty china, the silver, the flowers, the pink shaded candles.

For a moment she looked at it all with dimming eyes. Then she leaned her head against the wall by the telephone and burst into tears.

MADAME X

A Great Emotional Story of Mother Love, Novelized by J. W. McConaughy by Special Arrangement With Henry W. Savage from Alexandre Bisson's Powerful Drama. Copyright, 1910, by the H. K. Fly Co

CHAPTER XX (Continued).

Raymond had watched court proceedings in criminal cases so often that he was as familiar with the routine as a professional lawyer; but now that he was for the first time an actor it all seemed strange and overwhelming. He was conscious only that Helene and his father never took their eyes off him, but he never looked their way again. The voice of the clerk reading the charge sounded far away and seemed to be no part of the present scene.

"—In consequence of which the woman, Larroque, is accused of having, on April 5, 19—, at half past five in the afternoon, committed an act of voluntary homicide in room 24 of the Hotel of the Three Crowns in Bordeaux, on the person of Monsieur Frederick Larroque, a crime punishable by Articles 295 and 304 of the Penal Code."

The voice stopped amid absolute silence, and then Raymond heard the grave, gentle tones of the kindly old President of the Court.

"Woman Larroque, you have heard the charge against you. You are accused of having committed an act of voluntary homicide on the person of your lover, Frederick Larroque. What have you to say in your defense? Do you admit that you are guilty of this crime?"

He paused and Raymond, turning in his chair, looked on at his client. Every eye in the room was on her. She was sitting entirely in black and wore a black shawl over her head that almost entirely concealed her face, excepting from those directly in front of her. Her profile was toward the judges. The black background made her pallor almost ghastly. Her features were set and hard—a hopeless mask of chalk. She gave no sign that she had heard the President's words.

"You refuse to reply?" he went on. "You permit it to be construed silent as you keep silent under examination? Let me warn of you, in your own interests, to speak. Your silence can only be harmful in your case. Do you refuse to speak?" He paused again.

"The matter is in the hands of the jury. You shall hear the evidence against you. Think of the court, call the first witness!"

A stir and a murmur ran through the court as the President settled back in his chair and the clerk called "Victor Chouquet! Victor Chouquet!"

The First Witness

Perissard and Merivel had managed to secure seats well forward and watched the proceedings with the interest of experts.

"What did I tell you, my dear Merivel!" whispered the senior partner. "It has all been arranged!"

"Of course it has!"

While they were awaiting the appearance of the boots of the Three Crowns, Raymond gazed curiously at the jury. It was the first time he had ever seen one, and he was wondering what tragic story was behind the faces of the twelve men before him. One did not seem to be aware that he was alive, one, resting his head on one hand over the row of judges. Suddenly Raymond saw her open a gold cigarette case in amazement. Her bosom heaved and her fingers worked as she took out a cigarette. A tic rose hastily and leaned over the desk. "What is the matter, Madame? Are you ill?" he asked in quick undertone.

She turned to him with the jerky, uncertain movements of an automaton, but kept her eyes fastened on the bench.

"What—who—who is that gentleman—talking to the judges?" she whispered. The words could barely be heard.

"President Perlot, from Toulouse," answered Raymond. He supposed that she had asked this apparently idle question to conceal the real thought that had caused her agitation, and so went on earnestly:

"Believe me, madame, your silence may lose your case for you. I beg you to speak!"

She drew the cloth more closely about her face and stared out over his head with wild eyes. With a shrug of his shoulders Raymond dropped back into his chair and turned to listen to the examination of Choquet. He was beginning to feel more master of himself and more certain that his case was hopeless.

"State your name, age and profession" commanded the President as Victor took his stand behind the witness railing.

"Victor Emmanuel Chouquet, twenty-nine years of age, boots at the Hotel of the Three Crowns," replied Victor in his high-pitched drawl.

"Where do you live?"

"At the hotel, M. the President."

"You are no relation of the prisoner, are you, or in any way connected with her service?"

"No, M. the President."

"Raise your right hand!—Do you swear to speak without hatred or fear, to tell the whole truth? Say 'I swear it.'"

"I swear it," repeated the witness.

"Put down your hand. Give your evidence!"

Victor shuffled uneasily up against the railing and turned to the jury.

"On April 5th," he began, "a man and woman came to the hotel——"

Asked to Leave Bottle

"What time was it?" interrupted the President.

"It was a short time after lunch."

"Go on"

"They had a trunk and a bag. I took them up to Room 24 on the top floor, and the man said, as he went into the room, 'Now, Madame, is it?' And the woman said 'Oh, what does it matter—this room or another one?' and he replied, 'No, indeed. Well, I don't suppose we will be here long.' Then they asked me for absinthe and cigarettes, which I got for them, and the man asked me to leave the bottle."

"Did they drink much?" interrupted the President.

"I didn't notice."

"What was the attitude of the woman?"

"She didn't have any," replied Victor, and a little titter ran over the room. The court usher frowned and rapped on his desk.

"Did she look happy, sad, calm or nervous?" explained the president, irritably. Victor considered for several moments.

"She looked very tired," he replied.

"Go on!"

"Some time afterward my wife went up to their room for the police form and took down their names—M. and Mme. Larroque, from Buenos Ayres on their way to Paris."

"Your wife was at the hotel?"

"Yes, she was chambermaid there."

"Why has she not been called as a witness?" the judge demanded with a frown. Victor rubbed his hand across his eyes and snuffled.

"Because she's not there any longer. On the evening after the murder she left me and I haven't seen her since. A few days after she had gone she wrote me a note, saying, 'Don't worry about me. I am very happy. Take care of the child.'"

There was a quick shuffling of feet and exclamations of pity and sympathy swept across the court. The usher frowned and pounded his desk again. The President's face softened as he watched Victor wiping away his tears, and he gave him time to recover before requesting him to go on.

"At about half-past five, as I was taking water to a room on the same floor," said Victor at last, "I heard a shot fired and a shriek in Room 24. I rushed in and found M. Larroque lying the floor in front of his wife, who held a smoking revolver in her hand. I took the revolver away from her and held her tight."

"Did she say anything?"

"She said: 'There's no hurry. I shan't try to get away.' Then the police came and took her off."

"That is all you know?"

"Yes, M. the President."

"The prisoner is the woman you call Madame Larroque, is she?"

Victor stared at the white face above Raymond's head.

"Yes, M. the President," he said. The President looked in the same direction.

"Prisoner, you have heard the evidence of this witness? Have you anything to say?" he asked solemnly.

Had Not Heard

Jacqueline had not heard the evidence. From the moment she recognized her husband a thousand mad thoughts had stormed through her mind to a bewildering phantasmagoria. Her fierce hatred had given birth to a hundred fantastic schemes of revenge which the stunning blow had paralyzed. Should she wait until her character and her shame had been painted their blackest and then tell the crowded court ...at he was her husband? Should she go to the place of execution and denounce him from the scaffold? No. She could not do that because of her boy. She had killed Laroque to hide the shame from her son. How could she proclaim it now and make that terrible crime useless? But couldn't she tell just enough to show him—God! how she hated him! who she was and to what he had driven her? She could picture his face as he recognized her and listened to the horrible story of her degradation. She was glad that there was no vice so low that it had not smitten her; for thus the greater would be his anguish when she proclaimed it. * * *

"You insist on remaining silent?" the President was saying.

"Wait a little! Wait a little while!" she murmured, but so low that even Raymond could not catch the words.

"Gentlemen of the Jury, have you any questions to ask the prisoner?" He paused and turned to M. Valmorin.

"Thank you, no, M. the President," bowed the prosecutor.

"Has the counsel for the defence anything to ask the witness?"

The instinct of the cross-examiner triumphed over the nervousness of youth.

"The witness has mentioned that my client had been drinking absinthe," said Raymond, rising. His voice was sure and steady. "I should like to know whether he thinks she was intoxicated."

The President nodded and turned to Victor.

"You hear the question? Was the prisoner drunk or sober when you ran into the room and found her with the revolver in her hand?"

Victor shifted uneasily and appeared to hesitate.

"Well, she was very much excited," he said. "There's no doubt about that, M. the President. Her eyes were like a crazy woman's and her face was red and she didn't seem to know what she was doing."

A stir and murmur from the benches told Raymond that the audience credited him with a point scored.

"Then you say she was drunk?" he insisted.

"Well, some would say she was and some would say she wasn't," replied the witness, falling back on his never-failing formula.

A titter ran through the court at this conservative answer, and the President frowned.

"What would you say?" demanded Raymond. Victor's confusion was complete.

Told of Arrest

"I—I wouldn't say!" he stammered. Raymond turned back to his desk with a shrug of his shoulders.

"Counsel for the defence, have you any more questions to ask the witness?" demanded the court.

"No, M. the President," was the reply.

"Stand down!" commanded the President. "Clerk of the Court, call the next witness!"

The next witness was Sergeant Fontaine, the gendarme who had arrested Jacqueline. He talked in jerky, military tones, and gave his evidence as if he were dictating an official report. He told of arresting her in the hotel and taking her to the prison.

"Did she say anything while you were taking her off?" asked the court.

"She said nothing," he replied. "I asked why she had killed Larroque and she said she had done it herself and that in doing a disgraceful thing which would have brought unhappiness and despair to someone she loved. I tried to make her say more, but she wouldn't. She said that she wouldn't say another word to anybody, and she didn't."

No one had any questions to ask the witness, though it was plain from the manner in which some of the jurors gaze at the prisoner that the policeman's testimony had made an impression. They were the usual run of jurors—plain middle-class tradesmen with a rather better than average intelligence: and, as Raymond looked them over, he felt that there was grim work to be done to upset their judgment and make them follow the impulse of emotion. He did not think he could do it.

Victor and the sergeant were the only witnesses for the prosecution, and Raymond turned to Jacqueline when the gendarme had taken his seat beside Victor on the bench reserved for witnesses.

"The police rest, M. the Public Prosecutor," he said solemnly. "I ask you for the last time, prisoner, in your own interest, to tell the jury why you committed this crime. You told the policeman who arrested you, and who has just given his evidence, that you killed Laroque to prevent him from committing an infamous and abominable act which would have caused trouble to some one you loved. To what act did you allude? To whom would it have caused trouble? Knowledge of the reasons which caused you to commit the murder might, in the hands of the lawyers for the jury in reaching a verdict. You refuse to speak? Have you made up your mind to say nothing——"

He paused; and then——

"M. the Prosecutor!" he announced.

M. Valmorin rose slowly and bowed to the President, and then to the jury. It was an old story with him—the murder of a degenerate man by a fallen woman. He had only to go over and old formula.

"There you are!" whispered M. Perissard to his colleague. "It is practically over!"

"Gentlemen of the Jury, I shall not keep you long," began M. Valmorin, in a gentle, pleasant voice. "The crime on which you have to give your verdict is simple and baneful. The woman has killed her lover—but who is this woman? What is her real name? Where does she come from? Who is she? We do not know! Since her arrest the prisoner has refused to answer all questions that have been put to her. She has spoken a syllable in reply to the Examining Magistrate, and yet we have seen for yourselves that here in court she has insisted on remaining obstinately silent, although the silence cannot but harm her case—if she has the slightest shred of defence!

"It is sometimes an explanation of a murder—if not an excuse for it—to be found in the motives that inspired it. Murder is often committed for reasons of money, for reasons of love, for reasons of jealousy, or to quench a thirst for vengeance. And the passion which arms the criminal's hand, which disturbs the power of reasoning and which makes her act without thinking—this, in some cases, diminishes her responsibility and the horror with which the act of murder makes every man feel."

Desperate Desmond

Claude and Rosamond, reunited once more, are eating their dinner in the dining car and talking over the perils they have passed. Little do they dream that their arch enemy, Desperate Desmond, is riding on the step beneath the car, plotting the while to send them to their doom. Wonder where the car got that name?

This is an impecunious tourist who was shy the coin to buy a ticket from there he was to where he wanted to go. But his conscience troubled him considerations scruples against beating the railroad company, so he stowed himself away on a beam. Just now he is trying to get near enough to the dining car so he can smell real food.

Stealing a ride may not be a highly moral transaction, but many a man in hard luck has to try dire straits. Trying to wreck a train, however, is quite another matter, and the hobo does not purpose that his full speed. In about two seconds Desmond on the sonk and knocks him to the rails, leaving the car wheels to do the rest.

Just about this time, another train meets ours (not ours, exactly, but the one we have been talking about). Now you can see for yourself they are not more than three feet apart and both going their full speed. In about two seconds there will be a collision, and we may lose the entire cast of our refined little drama.

What do you think of that for luck? There was that car, Desmond, lying unconscious on the track about to be ground to pieces under the wheels, when suddenly the car is tipped up on end by the collision, and Desperate Desmond escapes unscathed. And the worst of it is, Claude and Rosa mond are in that car.

Desmond has recovered consciousness, and in spite of his narrow escape from death, he's at it again. The villain as usual is disguising himself as a physician. He drags Rosamond from the wreck and beats it, leaving Claude to his fate. To-morrow's pictures will show how Claude escaped and pursued the villain.

Useful Aids to Beauty

PARCHED LIPS

It is entirely undecessary to have dry, cracked and colorless lips. If from any cause, such as chewing the lips or exposure to cold and dry atmosphere, the lips become parched and seamed, a good lip salve should at once be used freely. If the weather is cold it is well to use a lip pomade before going out. Apply the salve thickly and then wipe it off with a soft cloth or an old handkerchief. Wetting the lips will cause them to chap. Sometimes in cold weather the breath freezes on the lips and coming in contact with the lips causes them to chap and crack.

BEAUTIFUL TEETH

Teeth cannot be beautiful unless they are healthy, and they cannot be healthy unless they are well cared for. If you neglect them they will revenge themselves by aching, becoming discolored or crumbling away. On the other hand, if well treated they will do their best to deserve the title "jewels of the mouth."

CARE OF NAILS

Finger nails should not be worn extremely long. Chinese wear pointed nails, but the woman who really cares for her hands will not want such talons. When filing the nails, bear in mind that the almond shaped nail is to be preferred, but at the same time follow as near as possible the outline of the tips of the fingers. The greatest care must be used in pushing down the cuticle, or if jagged, broken, or torn, hangnails will be caused. If there are torn spots in the cuticle surrounding the nails cut them off as closely as possible with the scissors and touch the spot with a drop of peroxide.

STRAINED EYES.

Salt water is excellent for strained eyes. A teaspoonful of table salt added to a glass of water with a pinch of borax makes a fine wash where the eyes are tired. Buy a glass eye cup, and when ready to bathe your eyes, fill the cup half full of salt water solution and hold it up quite near to the eyes. Now lower the head and fit the cup to the eyesocket. Slowly throw the head back, holding the cup pressed tightly against the socket. When the head is as far back as it will go, wink the eye in the lotion, so it may be bathed with the soothing fluid. Open and shut the eye at least a dozen times. Refill the cup and repeat the operation with the other eye.

REDUCING FLESH

Anything which induces perspiration and eliminates waste matter will aid in reducing flesh. Turkish and Russian baths are highly beneficial, but injurious if kept up too continously. Once a week for either with daily hot bathing at home, is wiser. Faintness must be guarded against. A cold compress upon the forehead and face usually acts as a preventive.

The Taming of Rodolphus

By KENNETT HARRIS

"I DON'T know as there's much of anythin'," replied Nome Grigg to the general demand for information, "ceptin' that Jeff Taylor and his wife have sure enough split up," he added, after a moment's consideration.

"Well, that's news," said the storekeeper, encouragingly. "What seems to be the trouble with 'em, Nemy?"

"Don't do with Jeff," cussedness nohow. That's what I hear," Neme answered. "Fears there ain't no plessin' him, anythin' she does, so she's quit an' gone back to her folks."

"Jeff's in luck," snorted Old Man Somerindyk. "There's a heap of these yer wimmen around 'at can't please a man nohow. They'll burn up good victles and forgit to feed the chickens an' seo'ch a man's Sunday shirt an' use a cord of stovewood a day, an' then if a feller dast to open his head about it, they'll say, 'Land sakes! I declare there hain't no plessin' you nohow.' Pity they wouldn't all quit an' go home to their folks."

"Well, there's all kines," remarked Washington Hancock. "Remember the easy he may be, the uglier he is an' the meaner he's been actin', the more they'll pity him, providin' he's all alone in the world, pore fellers!

"Elvira's folks warned her about Rodolphus P. They done took her out to the cimetry an' showed her his first wife's grave an' had the stonnes that he'd hired tell her the kine of a nagger, complainin' feller he was, but Elvira, she allowed that the trouble was that nobuddy had ever laid thersel'ves out to do the way he wanted things done an' that was what she proposed to do when she married him. 'All right,' says her folks. 'Go right ahead, an'y don't say that we didn't tell you, becus we've done told you.'

"So Elvira went ahead an' married him, an' the fust thing Rodolphus done was to tell her that the bran spick-an'-span dentistry wedding dress in the 'ot-a'-earth' wasn't fitten for nothin' but dish-rags.

"'Do you really think that's all it's fitten for, Rodolphus, honey?' she says.

"'Co'se I do,' says he. 'If I was a gal-prospectin,' God-fearin' woman I wouldn't wear it to a dawg fight, let alone my own wedding.'

Taken at His Word

"Right there the cat got between his laigs an' he kicked it outen the door. 'I wisht somebuddy ud kill that feol cat,' he says. 'She's everlastin' in the way an' she ain't no good 'ceptin' to raise kittens for me to drown.' An' with them few remarks, he went out to the barn to do his chores.

"When he came back he found a nice, smokin' hot supper waitin' for him, and on a side table was the heartiest weddin' dress cut up into neat dish-rag sizes. He couldn't hardly keep back the tears that he'd bired tell her the kine of a nagger, complainin' feller he was, but Elvira, she allowed that the trouble was that nobuddy had ever laid thersel'ves out to do the way he wanted things done an' that was what she proposed to do when she married him. "'Co'se I do,' says he. 'If I was a gal-prospectin,' God-fearin' woman I wouldn't wear it to a dawg fight, let alone my own weddin.'

"He didn't do right well. There was two or three wimmen tried to keep house for him, but the on'y one stayed longer than a week was stone deef an' dinfly she got so she couldn't stan' the sardonic Rodolphus P. made. She said she might be oversensitive, but for her part she considered it right insultin' to have a man start to pull his whiskers out by the roots becus there was a mite too much saleratus in the biscuit and she didn't think no real gentleman would act that-away.

"So Rodolphus P. rastled with the work himself until a lady by the name of Elvira Hepburn took pity on him. There's been about a woman, specially when she's got to be apast thirty-five or sech a matter an' hain't been married: they'll pity a man. Don't matter how he abused ornary he may be, the uglier he is an' the meaner he's been actin', the more they'll pity him, providin' he's all alone in the world, pore fellers!

LEFT TO DIE IN BURNING HOUSE

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 24.—Three burglars broke into the residence of Lowell Hoag, No. 16 Main street, early today, attacked John Bantin, an invalid man, bound and gagged and dragged him and then set fire to the place after robbing him. Bantin would have lost his life, but for the fact that Hoag was awakened by the smoke. He went into the hallway and traced the smoke to Bantin's room.

Drapery at the head of Bantin's bed was burning and Bantin was unconscious. His hands were bound with rope, while around his head was a rag saturated with chloroform.

FIREMEN SAVE HATS AND CAPS

Prompt and heroic work by members of two protective companies saved several score of hats, "silkers" and just possibly "duke," from serious damage by smoke and water at a fire in the Stone building, three upper floors, but the greater part of stock in the Sphynx Hat store on the street floor would have been ruined had it not been for the protective men, who hastened to the scene and lugged the hat boxes to safety with the ease and dexterity of pro fessionals on the vaudeville stage.

TO CONTINUE TRUCK SHOWS

By J. C. KERRISON.

That the commercial vehicle section of the Jan. 31 to Feb. 4 show will become an institution is almost assured, although no definitive announcement on the subject has yet been made, it has been announced, however, that the so-called informal association will continue as an organization.

This being the case, its pleasure car show can ill afford to divide space at the Garden with the truck exhibits, so 'tis said the only remedy will be to continue the arrangement of the show just ended, giving a week to one class of vehicles and a week to the other.

The hope is generally expressed that the show committee next year will find some way of granting the electric passenger vehicles with the gasoline cars of the type. These little cars were utterly lost in the huge trucks that made up the bigger part of the second week's display at the Garden.

LECTURE ON SALESMANSHIP AT SCHOOL OF COMMERCE

An object lesson in practical salesmanship which interested every pupil of the senior class in the High School of Commerce was given by the Jordan Marsh Company at the school building, the demonstrator being the courteous aisle boy buying and selling. For the purpose a miniature section of the Jordan Marsh store was set up in the lecture hall, displays of goods on forms and in showcases being the work of salesgirls from the Jordan Marsh store, who explained how to sell their goods and deal with customers.

The exhibit was under the general charge of N. L. Fowler, Jr., head of the department of advertising and salesmanship of the school. Superintendent W. A. Hawkins of the Jordan Marsh Company loaned his interest in the practical lesson given to the pupils by his employees was frequently referred to. "Salesmanship" was frequently referred to. "Salesmanship" was frequently commended. Interesting addresses were made by Richards, H. D. Nathan, who has charge of the store and was shadow during the lesson, principal of the salesmanship class in the store, and several salesgirls. A cash girl assisted in the demonstration.

In his address Mr. Hawkins said in part: "Jordan Marsh Co. have opened this exhibiture department of salesmanship to give you an object lesson. I am here today with my assistants to finish the object lesson plain to you, and to impress upon your minds the importance and the dignity of salesmanship.

"I have you every one to think of how salesmanship is in some way or other entering nearly everything in the world. This is it over sometimes when down everything you can think of into which salesmanship does not enter, and you will be surprised to see what a small list you have.

"In the past too little attention has been given to proper instruction in this profession—and it be a profession, isn't one on which discredit has been cast by the many pretending to be salespeople who have no right to use that term.

"The work being done by the High School of Commerce in this direction is very gratifying, and it is with much pride that I greeted the school of salesmanship conducted by Jordan Marsh Co. with such satisfactory results."

HEAVINESS IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Heaviness developed in the early trading in Wall street to-day, with the result that but few stocks were quoting any amount of changes over their closing of yesterday. Reading was the leader in the railroad group, moving up from 155⅝ to 156¼ in the first half hour. Fractional gains were scored in St. Paul, Union Pacific, Lehigh Valley and the Hill shares. Steel common opened with fractional gains, but later shaded off and the price fell to about yesterday's closing. Amalgamated opened fractionally higher. American Smelting moved up ⅜ of a point.

Trading on the curb was quiet, with prices within a fraction of yesterday's closing. In London, American stocks were irregular without important price changes. The copper stocks were extremely heavy.

You've all heard that money-to-burn joke about Rhino managing money, so we don't need to hand you the same print on the definition. The main thing we wish to bring to view is the fact that the "Kentucky Belles" at the Old Howard are a beautiful bunch of girls, and they are all good lookers and get the coin. If you've out for a good time and want to see dolls that top them all slide in any afternoon this week or evening doing their 1 till 11 at the old Howard.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JANUARY 24, 1911

Now a Flying Machine Service Is Planned Across Lake Erie

Before Long That Will be a Mere Commonplace, and Passenger Carrying Flying Machines Across the Atlantic and the Pacific Will be Firmly Established. Only Very Old-Fashioned People and Freight Will Travel ON the Water

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

In Detroit a company has been organized to establish regular flying machine service across the lake between Cleveland and Detroit. As soon as this service is established and working well, the next step will be the establishment of flying machine communication regularly between Cleveland and Buffalo, and Detroit and Buffalo, above the waters of Lake Erie.

These pioneers of the air may succeed and they may fail. We hope that they will succeed.

No matter what happens, however, to the pioneers, there is no doubt whatever as to the eventual result. Flying machines will cross Lake Erie and all the Great Lakes regularly. And, more than that, flying machines will cross the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans.

Already the machines travel with reasonable safety when they do not go too high above the ground and when they pay decent regard to the wind.

In a very short time to come, the machines of great speed and power will look back upon the machines of to-day that go sixty miles an hour as the engineers of our fast express trains look back to the excart of old days.

To conquer the air, to laugh at the power of the wind, is simply a question of the power in your flying machine engine. And by rising to a sufficient height, with machines enclosed, and the passengers protected against atmospheric conditions, as they are in the flying express train, the wind can be entirely disregarded, as it is non-existent.

A few miles up in the air the wind, very gentle and even, blows always in one direction. The airship of the future bound on a long journey will rise to the proper height, balance itself in that moving, peaceful stratum of air, which never changes, which is unmoved by all the storms below. And that airship will fly around the earth, or half or quarter the way around it, utterly regardless of conditions in the atmosphere below.

The powerful engine in the flying machine will disregard the winds, the so-called hurricanes, just as the powerful engine in the great ocean steamship disregards the waves powerful enough to overwhelm the timid boats of other days.

Those that plan this flying machine service between Detroit and Cleveland are looked upon as visionaries, as men gambling with fate. But they are really the useful, intelligent and courageous pioneers, venturing out into the field of science and achivement, as the pioneers of olden times ventured out into our Western country. Some modern pioneers of the air have lost their lives and others will lose their lives, as the old frontier pioneers lost their lives and their scalps. But as they conquered the Western region and gave it to civilization, so the pioneers of the flying machine will conquer the air and give that great domain to humanity—a new kingdom, a new possession, a new and perfect road of travel.

We are not far from the day when only the old-fashioned and timid people will travel long distances UPON the land or UPON the water.

We are not far from the day when all long and fast travel will be through the air, above the trees and mountains.

You meet occasionally to-day in Paris some old-fashioned French woman who walks up five flights of stairs in her hotel, because she will not risk taking the "dangerous elevator."

A majority of the people take the elevator, and they know it is safe.

So it will be, before very long, only the old-fashioned and cautious will refuse to use the flying machines. The young men of another generation will find it difficult to believe that men actually were once glued to this earth, crawling painfully along its rough surface, tossing seasick and miserable on the ocean's waves, before man's conquest of the beautiful, broad and even paths above him.

To Health Authorities Everywhere

Look Out for—and Throw Overboard—the Ancient Hoards of "Food" Stuffs About to Come Out of Cold Storage

The pirates that trade in high prices for food have been—for the moment—caught in their own trap.

The cold storage vaults are overcrowded, some of the speculative gentry have been forced into bankruptcy. The firms that have failed, or are about to fail, will be forced to throw their cold storage goods on the market in great quantities.

Ancient eggs, chickens, fish and other cold storage deliocacies will flood the market. And presumably the wise speculator will sell his oldest food treasures first.

Many billions of ptomaines will see the light of day and then find a refuge in human stomachs.

This newspaper asks the health authorities to watch for the marketing of these cold storage atrocities, keep track of the dangerous sort, and save human stomachs by using health board authority and throwing the unfit food overboard.

No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him

Are You Doing Your Share?

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

WHATEVER your position in life, however dissatisfied with your work and the recompense, you want to remember one fact—you can be "worth while."

You can make yourself worthy of better things, and when you have become fully worthy of a change for the better, when you have absolutely outgrown your present environment, a change will come.

You may have no time for self improvement, as you may be working from early morn till late at night at some distasteful labor; and you may tell me it is impossible to grow or make progress under such conditions.

But watch your opportunities. You are in hourly contact with your fellow workers. Watch yourself to see that you do not show selfishness in your treatment of them.

In the place where you live or board, in the street cars, in the shops where you go for your supplies, how are you treating your fellows?

Are you as unselfish, or polite, or considerate, as you want others to be to you?

Have You Done Your Share?

You think Monopoly and Greed are responsible for your troubles. You are overworked and ill-paid because those in higher places have no thought for others. But are you showing thought for others?

Look back over this day.

Have you been unselfish and kind and considerate toward every one?

Did you start the day with a loving word and smile at home?

Did you enter your place of business with a cheerful air and make everybody feel better by your presence?

Or did you carry a cold, surly or irritable personality into the room that fell like a wet blanket on those about you?

Were you patient and polite when you went shopping?

Did you remember that the salesmen and women were needing encouragement and sympathy in their work just as much as you do in yours?

Did you think to say a pleasant word to the newsboy and bootjack, or did you forget that they had as much right to consideration in this world as yourself?

Let Us Improve Self.

If you have thought of nothing and nobody to-day but yourself, your own troubles, hardships and needs, then rest assured you have not fitted yourself to fill a higher position or receive better pay.

The world wants better men and women more than it wants better government.

All changes which can be brought about, in any way of reform, will never make the world a particle better until you and I, and every living man and woman, set to work to improve ourselves.

Great changes are on the way. Great abuses are about to pass. Unexpected events are near. But no one of these changes, nor all of them, can materially benefit humanity unless individuals fit themselves to be better men and women.

What have you done to-day to improve yourself?

The Gay Grasshopper

By KENNETT HARRIS

UPON the air I feel a wintry chill
And in my Summer underthings I shiver;
For, not to mention a five-dollar bill,
I doubt that I possess a doit or stiver.
I'll have to pad me with newspaper pages.
Where, tell me where, are all my Summer's wages?

I HARDLY slept last night, which wasn't strange.
With one thin blanket and a room not heated.
And, yet, of course, I cannot make a change
Until my bill for room rent is receipted.
What will it be, too, when a blizzard rages!
Where, tell we where, are all my Summer's wages?

I MEANT to save to buy an overcoat;
The one I have is worn out past all patches;
Gloves, too, for, overhauling them, I note
The only pair remaining are not matches.
I'm nearing seediness by rapid stages.
Where, tell we where, are all my Summer's wages?

AH, but the Summer wore a smiling face!
And the frugality I was intending
I quite forgot, and swiftly went the pace,
In all her million ways of pleasant spending.
Wherefore the question that my thought engages:
Where, tell we where, are all my Summer's wages?

FULL many mortals have been in my plight.
They had the gay old time for which they lusted,
And then awoke, after a freezing night,
From broken sleep, dead-broke, like me—clean busted.
The heartfelt wail has echoed down the ages:
Where, tell we where, are all my Summer's wages?

TAKE warning, all, by my unhappy fate,
The fate of those who never save a copper
Be wise, in time be wise, and emulate
The careful ant, and not the gay grasshopper.
Certain it is you never hear the sages
Cry, "Tell me where are all my Summer's wages!"

The Secret of Wealth

By THOMAS TAPPER

YOU do not need to be poor all your life.

You can have money if you will pay the price for it.

The two important words in this article are THRIFT and TIME.

Keep them in your mind as you read it.

The Thrift of the French is proverbial. They work on a simple principle. Spend less than the income, and save the balance. In their saving, the French figure on two factors—Money and Time. They realize that the greater of the two is Time; for time is that which piles interest on principal.

The French are a bond-buying people. They buy their own government bonds—called Rentes—and they hold them so as to give Time a chance to make Interest on the Principal. A French Rente may be purchased for as little as ten francs ($2). But the French do not confine themselves to Rentes at $2 each. They hold, as a people, American securities, the interest on which is $360,000,000 per year. In other words, every man, woman and child in the United States pays to the French nation nearly $7 per annum as a bonus on French thrift.

There are 90,000,000 of people in the United States. Twenty millions of them are children in the public schools. Deducting these, there are 70,000,000 remaining. Cut this number in two, and we have 35,000,000. The majority of these would be thrifty bondholders in France. But it is safe to say they are not all thrifty bondholders in America.

Why?

There are three reasons:

(1) The American people put their money in savings banks. There is now on deposit in our savings banks $4,000,000,000. You cannot conceive this sum of money, but it means about four hundred dollars each for the ten million depositors.

(2) It is not as easy to buy small denomination bonds in America as it is in France.

(3) Despite our prosperity, we are not strictly a thrifty people. We waste.

It is safe to say that practically every working man or woman in the United States could save something every week, if he wanted to do so. A man in New Hampshire, who now considers himself well-to-do, saved a dime a day for fifty years. With compound interest, this amounted to $5,572. This is not a large sum, but large compared with a dime. With a little farm paid for, this man is independent; for his bonds pay him about $280 per year.

Saving a little, daily or weekly, is the basis of a fortune. You can put such sums in a savings bank. When you have accumulated $50 or $100, you can buy a bond, for nowadays such bonds are to be had. The reason the savings bank can pay you 4 per cent. interest is because it buys bonds and mortgages that pay more. This pays their expenses and your interest. When you have accumulated $100 and want to buy a bond, keep these facts in mind:

(1) Go to a first-class bond house.

(2) If you do not know of one, get the information at the savings bank.

(3) For safety, have your bond registered.

(4) Never spend a cent of the income from your bond; just deposit the coupon in the savings bank to build up another hundred. The coupon is money.

(5) A first-class bond house will take just as much pains with your order for a hundred-dollar bond as it would if you bought a thousand-dollar bond.

(6) If hard times come on, and you need your money, the banker that sold you the bond will lend you money on it. In this respect, a good bond is practically as valuable for a loan as a piece of real estate.

(7) Watch your habits and check up the Waste.

(8) Waste is one of the many causes of Poverty.

(9) Self-indulgence and Laziness are its parents.

(10) Remember what Benjamin Franklin said:

Money makes money; but the money that money makes (interest) makes more money.
